18,000 SEE HARVARD-WILLIAM AND MARY GRID BATTLE IN STADIUM

Harvard Stadium, Cambridge, Oct. 16.—The smallest crowd of the season was on hand at Soldiers Field this afternoon to witness the third game on the Crimson schedule against the William and Mary team from Virginia.

About 15,000 were seated in the mammoth horseshoe as referee Longstreth of Haverford called the captains to the centre of the gridiron for the toss-up.

A strong south wind was blowing, affording an advantage to the team electing the bowl end of the stadium. Harvard appeared first on the field, followed by William and Mary, wearing bright yellow jerseys and green headguards.

LAUTERBACH, TEACHER, GUILTY IN GIRL CASE

Accused of attack on a six-year-old girl, who is the child of a prominent Cambridge man, high in political circles, Charles E. Lauterbach, Ph.D., Harvard psychology instructor, was found guilty after trial before Judge Arthur P. Stone in East Cambridge District Court.

A motion for a new trial, made by Lauterbach's attorneys on the ground of new evidence, was granted today by Judge Stone. The second trial was set for Monday.

In deference to the child, her family and her future, the Boston Evening American withholds her name.

Mr. Lauterbach has been an instructor of educational psychology at the Harvard University Graduate School of Education for two years and lives in Grozier road, Cambridge.

He was represented at the trial by Attorneys Gallinger and Stearns. The offence, it is alleged, was committed on September 30.

The session at which Mr. Lauterback was convicted was secret [illegible] everyone, except those connected with the case being barred from the courtroom. Details of the charge were carefully guarded by authorities.

A motion for a new trial in the trial court instead of the usual appeal to Superior Court, is said to be an unusual procedure.

According to William A. Forbes, clerk of the court, another judge, instead of Judge Stone, who is presiding justice, will sit at the second trial.

MARINES ORDERED OUT TO PROTECT MAILS

Washington, Oct. 16 (I.N.S.).—The Federal government decided today to call out the United States Marines to protect postal cars and mail trucks carrying valuable consignments of mail from the depredations of robbers.

The move was decided upon at a conference between Postmaster-General Harry S. New and Major-General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the Marine Corps, following approval of the plan at a Cabinet meeting.

The employment of marines to guard the mails is the government's reply to the thugs who in recent weeks have piled up an amazing number of mail robberies, the latest of which in Elizabeth, N. J., resulted in the killing of the driver and the wounding of three others by a machine gun gang.

This is the second time that the government has had to call on the marines to combat the robber menace.

Three years ago, following an epidemic of mail car hold-ups, marines were stationed on the cars and there was an immediate diminution of the robberies.

As conditions grow better the marines were withdrawn. Now they are going back. This time they will

60,000 SEE CLASH AT NEW HAVEN

Yale Bowl, New Haven, Oct. 16.—A shrieking, hysterical mob of 60,000 men and women saw the Yale Bulldog trample Jess Hawley's Dartmouth hopefuls in the mud of defeat today.

The Big Green was first to score, counting with a touchdown shortly after the opening of the second period. The points came through a series of [illegible] passes, in which Lane and McPhail were the principals, and a plunge from the two-yard line by Black. McPhail added an extra point with a drop-kick.

The crowd was slow in arriving at the Bowl, only a few hundred being on hand when the gates were opened at 1 o'clock. There were only a few thousand scattered around the bowl three-quarters of an hour before the start of the game. But 15 minutes later they were swarming in in droves.

The Dartmouth squad arrived from Derby, where they have been quartered shortly after noon, escorted by Head Coach Hawley and Dr. Crisp. H. Sage, Clark Tobin, Larry Bankhead and Harry Hillman.

A gloom was cast over the Dartmouth squad and undergraduate body when it was learned that John W. Baxter, Jr., of Lansing, Mich., died this morning as a result of an automobile accident last night while

A SMALL ARMY in New Jersey, spread out around a 200-mile territory, is closing in on a group of murderous bandits, hunting the murderers with machine guns, gas bombs and hand grenades.

They have organized a regular drive, the kind used on tiger hunts in India. Hunting criminals has become one of our national occupations.

A REPORT from London says Turkey has mobilized four army corps, sending them "to the threatened region."

The region is supposed to be Smyrna, in which the energetic Mussolini is deeply interested.

RACQUET QUEEN GREETS PIGSKIN HERO, EATS BEANS, KEEPS "OLD SOUP BONE" IN TRIM

WHEN STAR MEETS STAR
Suzanne Lenglen, tennis star, greeting Harold B. Whittemore, one of the stars of the Middlebury football team.

"WAITED YEARS FOR THIS TREAT"
The tennis queen lost no time after her arrival in becoming acquainted with the Hub's favorite dish.

'AMERICAN MEN SO SOCIABLE'
"Strange I've never been reported engaged to an American. Perhaps the next time," said Suzanne.

THIS IS THE SORT OF MASSAGE SHE GETS
Suzanne getting her mighty right arm massaged by W. F. O'Brien, the trainer. "It keeps the old soup bone in trim," said O'Brien. She keeps fit at all times.

MARIE RIDES RUBBER DUCK IN SHIP'S SWIMMING POOL

By VICTORINE BELANGER

Suzanne Lenglen, famous French tennis artiste, here for an exhibition match at the Arena tonight, has become a Honeydew melon addict, and only the watchfulness of her masseur, W. F. O'Brien, prevents the tennis star from gorging herself with the delectable fruit.

"But I love them so," said the queen of the courts, as she gazed somewhat mournfully at the remains of a whole melon among the breakfast dishes in her room at the Hotel Lenox.

Suzanne rose at 10:15, after ten hours of refreshing sleep, and greeted her attendants cheerfully.

The first event on her daily program was a rub by Masseur O'Brien, who for years has been a necessary adjunct in the training camps of pugilists. He tells of having rubbed Dempsey, Harry Greb and Delaney, and more recently tennis champions.

After the rub the star enveloped herself in a light blue negligee, lined with white rabbit fur.

GETTING UP NOT SO EASY.

Always, unless that dear Mlle. Fyle is present, Suzanne breakfasts in her own room. Morning is the most trying period of the day for her, and Fyle is the only man who can get the French artiste down to the dining room for breakfast. When she is absent, as today, she takes her meals in her rooms with her mother.

Another thing which may have a bearing on breakfasting in her room, is the fact that the athletic Suzanne loves to lie late in bed. Early rising, she says with a shrug, spoils her whole day, makes her irritable.

For breakfast today Suzanne had a whole Honeydew melon of course, followed by two soft boiled eggs, three slices of dry toast, and cafe au lait, in the Continental style, consisting of one-third coffee and two-thirds cream.

VISITS ART MUSEUM.

Suzanne had a luncheon engagement with Mrs. Charles Murray at the Copley-Plaza, but changed her mind and went to the Museum of Fine Arts and later drove in the Fenway.

She refused to pose more than once for the photographers. This pose took place on the steps of the Lenox with Middleboro College students, to whom she gave numerous autographs.

The tennis star enjoyed a unique experience last night, at the same time gladdening the hearts of a number of boys from William and Mary College, stopping at the hotel.

TALKS TO COLLEGE BOYS.

Suzanne started for her room at 9:30. On the mezzanine floor she met the William and Mary boys, who begged her to give them a short talk.

Without hesitancy Suzanne complied, telling the boys how glad she is to be in this country and expressing the hope that she might be able to attend the game today.

On arriving at her room Suzanne found more than 50 letters from Bostonians, many of them containing invitations to social events and others, Suzanne smilingly admitted, offers of marriage.

PHYSICALLY PERFECT.

As regards physical condition, Suzanne is perfect, according to Masseur O'Brien.

"No one in this generation will ever see Suzanne's equal as regards her condition," he declared emphatically. "One reason that she has so marvelous a physique is that she never had massages while young.

It is a mistake to begin massaging a young athlete. It overdevelops the muscles.

"Suzanne is obedient to all my instructions and it is easy to keep her in condition. Since coming to this country she has eliminated drinking and smoking. Suzanne has three rubdowns a day.

MISS BRANDON WINS ARMY RACE

Brandon, Vt., Oct. 16 (A.P.)—Miss Brandon, a three-quarter bred bay mare, entered by the service troop of the Third United States Cavalry and ridden by Corporal S. J. Mathewson, today was awarded first place in the eighth annual endurance ride, finished by six out of the fourteen starters.

Miss Brandon is an eight-year-old, sired by Cock-of-the-Walk, an Arabian. Corporal Mathewson, 32-year-old veteran of the army horsemen entered, rode Peggy to victory two years ago and last year finished third on Lillian Russell.

Miss Brandon won a leg on the service cup for three years competition. Peggy A., who finished fourth, had two legs on the trophy by virtue of her wins the two last years. Beside the temporary possession of the cup, Miss Brandon won the first prize of $600.

The others in the order judged on condition, since all completed the 100-mile ride on time, were: Stockings, Third United States Cavalry, ridden by Sergeant Stanley Blazejewski; Rex Rysdyk, entered and ridden by R. T. M. McCready of Pittsburg, Pa.; Peggy A., Troop F, Third Cavalry, ridden by Sergeant Quatickery; Bunny Boy, Third United States Cavalry, ridden by Corporal Nickerson, and Lillian Russell, entered and ridden by Captain J. Washington, Oct. 16 (A.P.)—Thomas M. Hewitt, 31 years old, lawyer, is back in jail facing a charge of embezzlement after having been granted liberty to give nearly a quart of his blood to his three-year-old son, dying from anemia.

Hewitt, arrested in New York, has been awaiting trial here, unable to get bail. Doctors said only immediate transfusion would prolong the life of the boy, and Hewitt begged he might give his own blood.

Under heavy guard, he was taken to the hospital, submitted to the transfusion and then returned to jail.

Postmaster General New announced he would go before congress when it convenes in December and ask that an emergency appropriation be made immediately available to take care of the expense incident to the employment of the Marine Corps force.

It is recognized that with the Marine Corps at its present strength it would not be possible to employ a sufficient number of men for any considerable time in the work of protecting the United States mails.

Mail Robbery Suspects Escape Posse Shots

Round Brook, N. J., Oct. 16 (I.N.S.)—State troopers, police and posses of armed citizens late today continued their search in the Watchung hills for the machine gun thugs who Thursday killed a mail truck driver in Elizabeth, wounded three others and escaped with $187,000.

Eight fast autos filled with troopers were sent out to search every inch of road, as well as every house and abandoned shack.

Coon hunters' dogs routed four men at a remote point on the Raritan River. The men fled under a volley of shots from troopers who followed the baying dogs.

Four Robbers Escape With Newark Payroll

Newark, N. J., Oct. 16.—(I.N.S.)—While State troopers and police today were searching for the gang that stole a $167,000 payroll from a mail truck at Elizabeth, Thursday, four thugs today stole a $1500 payroll here and escaped in an auto.

MOVE TO SAVE BUFFALO FROM SLAUGHTER

Purchase by Boston and other American cities of the 300 tame buffalo that, according to present plans, are to be slaughtered for "sport" in Utah next month was urged today by two prominent Boston men.

Cities that "main zoos could make use of the buffalo for educational purposes, according to these Bostonians.

Dr. John H. F. O'Connor of No. 295 Commonwealth avenue, uttering vigorous protest against the hunting of the buffalo on the 20-mile island, in Great Salt Lake, where they are now quartered, said:

"To kill these 300 buffalo would be a disgrace to humanity. In Franklin Park we have an excellent zoo. Why not interest city authorities in buying some of the buffalo?

"I am sure these animals in zoos would be more beneficial to growing boys and girls than the knowledge that this great, purely American species was wiped out by the questionable sporting instinct of wealthy men shooting at tame animals.

"I say let every American city that has a zoo join with Boston in buying this herd, and if they can not take them all, let the Federal government place them on a protected preserve."

"I have seen thousands of buffalo and I am poignantly impressed by the heartlessness of slaughtering this herd in the name of 'sport'," said Richard J. Savage of the Roxbury Sportsmen's Association.

"The proper place for them, without any doubt, is in the city zoos. Boston's zoo could care for several of them, and I am glad to see a movement on foot to save them."

$102,000 LOSS IN LABOR BANK 'SWINDLE'

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 16—With $102,00 in cash reported missing from the Brotherhood Savings and Trust Company, a labor bank here, five men were under arrest today.

Charles E. Knapp, 50, of Pittsburgh, former private investigator, is being sought by authorities in connection with the missing funds.

The arrested men are:

R. A. McCrady, president of the bank.

William J. Kelly, vice-president.

J. L. Nelson, treasurer.

Frank T. Redman and Bennie Diamond, all of Pittsburgh.

The bank was ordered closed by the State banking department, which took over its affairs on report of the alleged swindle.

The arrests were made following information secretly given to detectives that bonds amounting to approximately $640,000, to be delivered at McCrady's office before 4 p. m. yesterday, had not arrived at midnight. Detectives refused to divulge the name of their informant.

Redman, who is not a depositor at the bank, endorsed a note for the $102,000, police said, to complete the $250,000 payment needed by Diamond and himself to purchase the securities at a big discount.

The money McCrady stated was delivered to Knapp, who had been introduced to him by Redman, McCrady said, and Knapp was to have returned with the bonds to McCrady's office.

The supposed bond salesman's absence at the specified time did not alarm him, McCrady said. He did not notify the police, believing Knapp to be unavoidably detained.

Had Frost in Springfield

Springfield, Oct. 16 (A.P.)—The first hard frost of the season visited this vicinity today, with a minimum reported temperature of 26 degrees. Perishable garden produce was wiped out in places.

IF YOU DON'T BELIEVE I'M PERFECT, ASK MA!

Howard S. Feldman, born Dec. 16, 1925, has been entered by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward I. Feldman, No. 54 County road, in the Perfect Baby Contest.

Hundreds of infants have been entered in the Boston Evening American-Metropolitan Theatre prize baby contest by their fond parents and other relatives.

The contest, which is being conducted in connection with the first birthday of the opening of the Metropolitan theatre, closes next Wednesday at noon. If your baby isn't entered, send its picture in at once. Children born in Boston since October 17, 1925, the date on which the theatre was opened to the public, may be entered.

Prizes that baby may win follow:

First Prize—$150 in gold.

Second Prize—$75 colored and framed enlargement of baby's picture; donated by Gus White, photographer.

Third Prize—$25 bank account for baby.

Fourth Prize—Dozen art photographs donated by Gus White, photographer.

ATTACH PAY OF EVELYN NESBIT

Chicago, Oct. 16 (A.P.)—The jewelry, clothing and personal belongings of Evelyn Nesbit, former wife of Harry K. Thaw, were attached and the dancer's wages were under garnishee order today to satisfy a claim of $250 for professional services by G. M. Smith, a dentist.

LOS ANGELES HOME AGAIN

Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 16 (A.P.)—The dirigible Los Angeles landed at the naval air station field here at 7 a. m. today after an uneventful return flight from Detroit.

Her return marks the successful completion of a test flight similar to one that spelled disaster to her sister ship, Shenandoah, while flying over Ohio a year ago.

The return was made in 12 hours and 15 minutes by way of Lake Erie, Buffalo, Syracuse, Albany and down the Hudson River Valley to New York.

SEA WASHES UP BODY IN QUINCY

Searchers, including the crew of a Boston police boat, who spent the night combing the shores of Quincy near "The Willows" in search of Frank A. Russell, fifty-three, of No. 6th Pen street, whose overturned boat was found, ceased their efforts today when the man's body was washed ashore.

According to police, Russell planned to spend the week end on Hangman's Island. He loaded a small boat with equipment and set out alone. The accident, police said, was due to the boat being too heavily loaded.

GIRLS AND MAN HURT IN CRASH

Two girls and a man were injured, while another man escaped injury, when two automobiles collided today at Melrose and Church streets, South End. Louise Contrabono and Anna Schelsandi of Melrose street, and Joseph M. Gorman of Elvin road, Roslindale, were treated by a physician at the home of the girls, all suffering from bruises and severely wrenched backs and limbs. The girls were riding in the automobile driven by Gorgio, according to the police. Arthur A. Boutell of Newbury street was the driver of the other car.

HERD OF BUFFALO 'SPORTSMEN' PLAN TO KILL
Boston, along with the rest of the country, is vigorously protesting the proposed slaughter of this herd of buffalo "for sport." The big slaughter is scheduled for the Great Salt Lake, Utah, district next month, and a movement has been launched to prevent it.

LEADS IN PROTEST
Maj. Gordon W. Lillie ("Pawnee Bill") of Pawnee, Okla., is leading the movement to avert the butchery, which he terms a "disgrace for gold."

THIS EYE-FULL WILL BE THE FIRST PART OF AMERICA ROUMANIAN QUEEN WILL SEE MONDAY

CHANGES PLANS SO AS TO S EE THIS FAMOUS SKYLINE

Queen Marie's first glimpse of the new world she comes to see will be the famous skyline—like a jagged, distorted saw—of New York. She changed plans for disembarking from the Leviathan so she could see it.

SHE WANTS HUB BEANS

Queen Marie of Roumania, who is reported to be anxiously awaiting her visit to America so she can partake of Boston brown bread and baked beans.

Capital "Knows Nothing" of Queen's Touring Plans

Washington, Oct. 16 (I.N.S.)—Harrassed officials of the State Department threw up their hands today and said they "didn't know anything" about Queen Marie's plans for touring the United States after her "official" visit to Washington.

Officially, it was explained, the State Department has charge only of the reception of the Queen at New York and escorting her to Washington. After she leaves the Capital, it was said, her itinerary is her own business, and she can arrange it through any agencies she sees fit.

The Rumanian legation appeared equally in the dark about the Queen's plans. They will await, it seems, the Queen's arrival.

Marie's Plans to Visit California Unchanged

By JOHN GOETTE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Aboard S. S. Leviathan, Oct. 16.—Queen Marie has made no changes in her American itinerary.

"The resort from Washington that the queen is eliminating her visit to California is absurd and out of the question," the queen's lady-in-waiting, Mme. Lahevary, stated today.

Report of differences over the queen's tour, due to alleged interference by Lois Fuller, dancing teacher and friend of the queen were also denied.

The question of professionalism is in danger of being raised with Queen Marie it seems.

The Queen, having promised an interview with the correspondents on board, later withdrew this promise, stating that the agent of a newspaper syndicate for which she was writing had called her attention to the fact that she was under contract to make no utterances to other newspapermen.

[Queen Marie writes exclusively for the Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers.]

Immediately it was suggested that this situation may place Queen Marie in the position of a professional writer visiting the United States, rather than a dignitary on an official visit.

Princess Ileana, however, was under no ban of secrecy. She confessed a liking for American automobiles and said she hoped to take one back to Rumania with her. As to the Charleston, she said it was a better exhibition dance than a ballroom dance, and anyway she confessed Prince Nicholas had told her she wasn't a very good dancer.

The Princess made her appearance in the ballroom last night as the guest of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. She danced with Richard Hollins, brother of Mrs. Wilson, and with members of the royal party.

The Queen spent some time swimming in the marble pool of the Leviathan this morning, having an amusing contest with her suite. Hohenlohe Langenburg, in a contest in riding a huge rubber duck which was floated in the pool.

FILENE FAVORS 5-DAY WEEK

Chicago, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—The five-day working week recently sponsored by Henry Ford has the support of Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant and a director of the International Chamber of Commerce. Here on route home from St. Louis Mr. Filene said he was heartily in favor of the plan.

"I consider the five-day week as a force that will bring about a reduction of waste in industry," he said.

"I believe Mr. Ford will succeed in his five eight-hour days a week as he did with his six eight-hour days."

Increase in net production, contentment for the masses, less class warfare and a better chance to apply political, social and economic remedies to industrial ills were listed as the benefits.

"Moreover it will compel all producers to improve their methods, take the loads more and more off the backs of men and put them on machinery, and, finally, there will be heavier production with costs at a point which will enable us to export temporary surpluses," he said.

Marie Pictures How Queen Must Travel

by Queen of Roumania

Aboard the SS. Leviathan, Oct. 16 (By Radio).—Someone has written to ask me "How a Queen Travels?"

First of all she travels comfortably, though personally my preference is not for great extravagance, glitter or show.

I have my own railway car, in which I have traveled all over Europe. It is a practical affair, with my own room, dressing room, several smaller compartments for those who must go with me, a dining room that can accommodate possibly a dozen at table, and a compact kitchen.

A Queen may not take her journeys alone. There is always a retinue. If she travels in her own country she has the privilege of a special train. I leave this privilege as much as I am to the King, for I move about a great deal—not as much as you Americans do, but all the same, of all my family, it is I who "go" the most.

So I try to have my carriage attached to the ordinary train, unless I am expected officially somewhere at a special hour.

The Queen can never travel without everybody knowing, everybody being on the alert. There can be no slipping away secretly or unexpectedly.

Always people see her off at the station and greet her arrival—usually great crowds. This means the Queen must always arrive spick and span—no untidy hair, no journey-tossed face.

A queen is a sort of public property. Everybody has the right to want some of her time, to ask her patronage, her moral support and very often, her money. Her purse is a sort of open pocket into which will feel they may put their hands. But sometimes there is not much in her pocket, and then she is very sad.

A Queen is expected to grace every sort of function with her presence and her smile. In my case, the day is complicated by my love for writing, for riding, for my garden, my children and my house or houses.

Often at the end of an over-full day I have the sensation of being swamped out—as though overmuch had been required of my heart, my brain and my purse.

All those I have not had time to receive feel they are right in being personally offended, yet I have done my very best. People seem to imagine that a royal person (being nearer the gods, perhaps) must have more hours of the day than ordinary mortals.

150 Yanks Change Ships to Sail Home With the Queen

New York, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—The New York World today said: "Advices received from the Olympic, which sailed twenty-four hours after the departure of Queen Marie and her entourage aboard the Leviathan, stated that more than 150 'demorarite' Americans had changed sailings from the Olympic to share the passage with royalty."

The dispatch, sent by a well-known publicist, concluded: "What price snobbery?"

BROWNING GETS FROST; "PEACHES" WILL SUE

New York, Oct. 16.—Edward M. Browning had the meeting with Peaches, his runaway bride, that he had so long desired, but his eloquence availed him nothing for they parted again, Peaches adamant in her refusal to return to the man who says he still loves her.

Following the meeting with her husband, Peaches and her mother went to the office of their attorney presumable to arrange for the suit against the "Cinderella man."

Accordingly Browning spent a lonely and forlorn day on his 32nd birthday, while his 15-year-old bride was arranging details with her attorney, added by her mother.

STUDENTS JOIN IN GUARD OVER COOLIDGE BOY

when Colonel Edward W. Starling, his bodyguard, accompanies him to social affairs and is introduced as "a friend of mine."

On the campus, alone, today, while his protector was busy in the town on personal matters, young Coolidge was promised aid by his fellow students in case any harm was impending. With discovery of the fact that he is being guarded, the entire student body has become his guardians, although little credence is placed generally in the possibility of trouble.

"Frank letters" threatening bodily harm to John Coolidge are reported to have caused Mrs. Coolidge some nervousness and led to the assignment of the guard. Details of the threats could not be learned.

Unconfirmed reports have it that threatening letters were sent to the White House by sympathizers of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted murderers whose case has caused radical agitation throughout the world.

It is the custom for the Secret Service to take positive steps in such cases, even though the letters are thought to have come from harmless cranks.

John Coolidge crossed the campus attired in blue sweater and gray trousers, today while Colonel Starling was at breakfast in a restaurant.

"What about the Secret Servic guard, John?" he was asked.

"I haven't got anything to say about it, but go ahead with you questions, if you want to. I'd like to say, though, that I know nothing about it, other than that my father sent him here and he's here. So'm I."

"Have you received threatening letters?"

"Absolutely not. I don't know whether anyone else has or not."

"What do you think was the purpose of the guard."

"I haven't the least idea. Of course, more or less people passing through Amherst stop and call and want to see me. Well, I haven't said anything about it, but it does get troublesome to have people calling all the time at my rooming house.

"I am here to study and go to college, like other fellows, and I would like to be left alone. But I have made no complaint about the tourists. That's about all I can say. I don't know what else I could say."

Following assurances of willing aid if anything happened, fellow students of young Coolidge made him stand for a lot of good-natured joshing.

Number Plates Under 100,000 Can Be Reserved

Any motorist now holding a number plate under 100,000 can have the same number for 1927 if he sends in his application blank and fee with a request for the identical number be fore Nov. 1.

The application must be filled out by some insurance company or agent, from whom the applicant must get a blank, and sent to Commonwealth Pier, accompanied by a check or money order.

By this plan Registrar Frank A. Goodwin hopes to get a "breathing spell" from the insistent demands of the public for low numbers.

'NO JURY' TRIAL RULED ILLEGAL

There is no way in this State legally to try defendants in criminal cases who waive their right of trial by jury, according to a decision today by the full bench of the Supreme Court.

The high court set aside the verdict of guilty that Judge Lummus of the Superior Court returned against Arthur W. Rowe and Lemuel Rowe, who were indicted for conspiracy to steal and voluntarily rejected a jury trial. Judge Lummus heard the evidence alone.

Judge Lummus heard the evidence alone.

It was the first time defendants had asked for trial without jury in a criminal prosecution, declared Supreme Court Justice Wait, who wrote the opinion of the court. In the absence of any statute authorizing a judge to act as a court for the trial of criminal cases, there is no tribunal empowered to supplant the jury trial, he wrote.

The court did not deny the defendants the right to refuse a jury trial, and they are now in their original status before the Superior Court, under indictment and awaiting trial when way is provided to handle the case.

William G. Abbott Dead

Wilton, N. H., Oct. 16 (A.P.).—William G. Abbott, 73, owner of the Hillsboro Woolen Mills here, died today after several months' illness. He was also owner of mills in Rhode Island and Massachusetts and a trustee of the American Woolen Company.

BLUENOSE WINS FIRST CANADA TITLE RACE

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 16 (A.P.).—The schooner Bluenose today won the first race of a series with the Haligonian, to decide the Canadian championship of the North Atlantic fishing fleet.

Bluenose won by over a quarter of a mile. Her time was 4 hours, 15 minutes and 24 seconds.

The second race between Bluenose, the former champion, and Haligonian, the new craft designed by the same architect and previously looked upon as a probable winner, will be held Monday.

Although beaten to the starting line by the Haligonian, which early established a considerable lead, the Bluenose gained steadily on her rival, demonstrating anew her superiority. The Haligonian, designed to beat the Bluenose by the architect of both boats, proved a poor second on all points of sailing.

The Bluenose bettered the Haligonian off the wind and raced away from her in windward work.

Shortly after the first mark had been reached, the Bluenose passed her rival and thereafter increased her lead with each leg of the race.

The race was over a course covering 29.3 miles. The boat winning two out of three races will win the Canadian championship and will qualify to race the Columbia, of Gloucester, for the North Atlantic fishing fleet championship, later this month.

The Haligonian is challenger in the present series, the Bluenose being undefeated champion of the North Atlantic fishing fleet.

2 HURT, 18 FLEE AS HUB BOAT IS BURNED

Provincetown, Oct. 16.—The steam motor trawler Pioneer, which put out from Boston for the Channel fishing grounds, was destroyed by fire twelve miles off Nauset coast guard station, but the eighteen men forming the crew were all saved early today.

The crew, after reaching safety declared three or four craft passed the trawler while it was burning and one played a searchlight over the Pioneer, but none offered assistance.

An explosion in the engine room caused the fire which spread so rapidly that Captain Michael Wise of East Boston ordered the craft abandoned, despite the roughness of the sea. The majority of the crew came from Boston and vicinity.

The two engineers, James and Elkanah Morash, were severely burned about their arms. They stuck to their posts when fire swept the ship and their shirting off of the engines probably saved the lives of the crew.

Seeing the flames the Coast Guard at Nauset put out for the scene and picked up dories containing fourteen members of the crew. These reported that Captain Wise and three others had remained aboard the craft, and they feared they were doomed.

Later it was learned that Captain Wise and his companions had left the blazing trawler in another dory and were safe aboard Pollock Rip Lightship.

The mate of the Pioneer was Richard Wise, also of East Boston.

WATER HEATER SAVES FUEL

By THEODORE DAHLQUIST
Pres. Dahlquist Mfg. Co.

I wish that I could gather together all the people in Greater Boston who are still denying themselves and their families the blessing of an abundant supply of continuous hot water in the home, and tell these people about the advantages, both economically and hygienically, of The Dahlquist Aquatherm Copper Range Boiler.

Of course, it is natural that I should be enthusiastic about a product that bears my name, and to which I have devoted so many years of my life. It is also undeniable that my desire to tell those who may not know its wonderful value to the home is based on business.

Nevertheless, there is also a desire to be of service to those who may not know the relative advantages of various hot water heaters.

I know you will buy some system. I also know that not every one in Boston will buy one of my appliances, but I do feel sure that a great majority of this season's prospective purchasers would quickly cast their preference in favor of the Dahlquist Aquatherm if they could see one first-handed in actual operation, or hear the enthusiastic recommendations of its gratified users from their own mouths.

MANY INSTALLED.

In that event I think we would have all we could do to keep pace with the season's demand, which in point of fact, is almost the case, at present. Since August 1 we have been installed since September 1 of this year than at any other period in our history so early in the Fall.

This means that people who know a good thing like the Dahlquist Aquatherm, recognize their duty to tell about it to those of their friends, who may be seeking the best and most economical system of hot-water heating to be had at the present time.

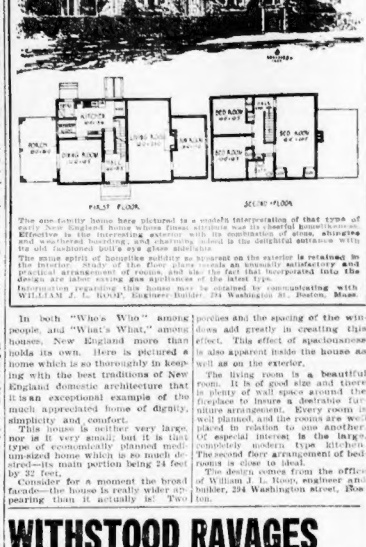
The Dahlquist Aquatherm copper range boiler in your home is a positive assurance of a continuous supply of piping hot water at any time of day or night. In this sense, it is a luxury (particularly when one considers the importance of plenty of hot water in the home from a sanitation standpoint), but in reality, it is a necessity because the cost of your water supply, when you employ Aquatherm to heat the water, is so small that it cannot sensibly be classed with luxuries.

Aquatherm may be used in combination with your gas ranges or burners, if you have a range boiler already in use, regardless of the type, the Aquatherm can be installed by removing the hot water and cold connections from the range boiler and connecting the Aquatherm unit. This is a simple operation which your local licensed plumber can attend to in a few minutes. Most plumbers are whole-heartedly enthusiastic about Aquatherm, "the newest hot water heater," and they'll tell you that you cannot make a wiser selection for an apparatus of this kind.

I must not forget to tell you that, if your home is not equipped with gas, the Aquatherm boiler can be efficiently operated with either electricity, coal or oil. With the Dahlquist Aquatherm, the hot water is conveyed directly from the heating source to the faucet, giving hot water almost as soon as the fire is lighted. When the faucet is shut, the hot water is discharged through "ports" back into the range boiler which immediately becomes a storage system.

A COLONIAL TYPE HOME OF DIGNITY AND COMFORT

Designed by William J. L. Roop, Engineer-Builder



FIRST FLOOR

SECOND FLOOR

The one-family home here pictured is a modern interpretation of that type of early New England home whose finest, strictest was its useful practicalness. Effective is the interesting exterior with its combination of stone, shingles and weathered boarding, and charming detail in the delightful arch-top with its old fashioned doll's eye glass sidelights.

The same spirit of hospitable welcome so apparent on the exterior is retained in the interior. Study of the floor plans reveals an unusually satisfactory and practical arrangement of rooms, and also the fact that incorporated into the design are labor saving gas appliances of the latest type.

Information regarding this home may be obtained by communicating with WILLIAM J. L. ROOP, Engineer-Builder, 294 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

In both "Who's Who" among people, and "What's What," among houses, New England more than holds its own. Here is pictured a home which is so thoroughly in keeping with the best traditions of New England domestic architecture that it is an exceptional example of the much appreciated home of dignity, simplicity and comfort.

This house is neither very large, nor is it very small, but it is that type of economically planned medium-sized home which is so much desired—its main portion being 24 feet by 32 feet.

Consider for a moment the broad facade—the house is really wider appearing than it actually is. Two fine porches and the spacing of the windows add greatly in creating this effect. This effect of spaciousness is also apparent inside the house as well as on the exterior.

The living room is a beautiful room. It is of good size and there is plenty of wall space around the fireplace to insure a desirable furniture arrangement. Every room is well planned, and the rooms are well placed in relation to one another. Of especial interest is the large, completely modern type kitchen. The second floor arrangement of bedrooms is close to ideal.

The design comes from the office of William J. Roop, engineer and builder, 294 Washington street, Boston.

BURNS OIL IN COAL RANGE

The new Silent Glow oil burner has all the features the experts have been trying for years to combine in a successful oil burner to replace coal in the kitchen range.

Controlling, flooding, the need of frequent cleaning and excessive oil consumption have all been conquered in the working out of this lately devised and efficient mechanism.

Twin cylinders, mounted upon a single base which is clamped to the bottom of the fire box are fed with kerosene or furnace oil. The burner is lighted as easily and safely as a lamp—but does not require a wick. The flame is blue, steady and silent —producing an intense heat which soon turns the whole burner to a glowing red. Top, oven and water front are heated to perfection and with no work beyond a daily refilling of the two gallon oil container which feeds the burner.

Silent Glow heat is quiet and steady and does away forever with the dirt and labor of handling coal.

The Silent Glow is absolutely safe, cannot flood, uses no pressure, has no tiny holes to clog or generators to change.

A Silent Glow Range Burner in operation may be seen any day of the week at the salesroom of Better Heating Service Company, No. 925 Boylston street.

NEW YORK HOTELS IN QUANDARY OVER PLANS

New York, Oct. 16.—At the Plaza Hotel it was learned that Lelo Fuller was ill and in bed but in answer to inquiries she stated through a secretary that she had nothing to do with the queen's reception plans.

The Ambassador Hotel management also was without information as to any change in the original reservations of twenty-two rooms on the fourth floor for the queen and her party.

At the Plaza the management announced that no arrangement had been made to receive Queen Marie there.

WITHSTOOD RAVAGES OF BIG HURRICANE

On his arrival in New York from the South, William M. Kinney, general manager of the Portland Cement Association, warmly praised the building standards of the U. S. Department of Commerce as a practical means of minimizing in the future the effects of such catastrophes as that which recently visited southern Florida.

Mr. Kinney, who has been a close student of building methods and a member of leading American technical societies for nearly twenty years, has just completed an exhaustive study of the Florida situation with the particular object of discovering lessons to be drawn in the interests of stormsafe construction for the future.

"We have refrained from talking about Florida up to this time," said Mr. Kinney, "through a desire to wait until a thorough examination could be made and reports received from engineers sent to the scene. Unfortunately, some of the earlier statements gave the building public quite an inaccurate picture.

RECORD-BREAKING STORM.

"Practical builders look upon any storm which approaches the intensity of the recent hurricane as almost beyond the range of human power to foresee or provide against. We are told that the barometer went lower than was ever recorded in the United States. The wind whirling along at 130 miles per hour, drove great waves seven to fifteen feet high over the area, undermined structures and drove marine craft and other heavy floating objects against the buildings with incalculable force. Seven to fifteen inches of rain fell in a few hours. While experience in previous extreme tests justified experts in their opinion that reinforced concrete construction would meet the test perfectly as it did in this case, that dwellings in any great number should withstand the onslaught may be considered remarkable.

"Therefore it is a very gratifying fact that domestic structures built in accordance with the building code of the U. S. Department of Commerce came through the storm almost undamaged. Certainly no stronger endorsement of the expert work rendered by Secretary Hoover's code committee can be found than in the examination of structures known to have been built according to its requirements for residential construction.

ONLY SLIGHT DAMAGE.

"The most striking example in the entire storm area is found at Coral Gables, where there is a group of about 3,000 residence, apartment and hotel structures, all of which have concrete block walls clad with artistic colored cement stucco. These buildings, erected under the supervision of the Coral Gables architect in accordance with the Hoover code, came through the storm without a single case of destruction or anything more serious than slight superficial damage. These houses were directly in the path of the hurricane as shown by the fact that trees and landscaping in the town were damaged to the extent of over a million dollars.

"Judging by the devastation to buildings in communities surrounding Coral Gables on every side, the property losses prevented by the use of substantial materials and adherence to these well recognized standards, easily may be placed twenty five to fifty million dollars for Coral Gables alone.

"Serious damage or destruction of buildings with walls of various masonry materials occurred to a lamentable extent where slip-shod construction methods were tolerated. In a great proportion of these cases, weak lime mortar, which would not be permitted under the New York code or by the Hoover code, is largely to blame. The masonry units are being picked up intact and rebuild in the walls."

SEEK MONEY TO PROVIDE NAHANT PARKING SPACE

The Metropolitan District Commission, as a result of an investigation of traffic conditions on the Nahant road, has filed a report with the clerk of the House of Representatives recommending an appropriation of $8000 to provide along that road parking space for about 1000 automobiles.

STABILIZATION FUND IS FORMED IN EUROPE

London, Oct. 16.—A bank trust of $1,000,000,000 has been formed for the stabilization of European currencies, according to the London Daily News.

English, French, Swiss and Belgian financiers are interested. American support is anticipated.

VARIETY VOGUE IN NEW HOME

By DAVID CALDWELL
of the Jackson-Caldwell Co.

This is the age of individuality in home-furnishings—not home outfits cut to pattern—the kind one might find in any one of a thousand different homes.

Really fine home furnishings are the factors that change the house from a mere shelter into a haven of comfort, inspiring beauty, and complete relaxation from the cares of the day.

The furniture manufacturing art has made rapid advances during the last decade, because of the co-operation of dealers and professional home decorators in interpreting the trend of popular preference and transmitting findings to the authenticated arbiters of furniture designing in this country today.

This has been of far-reaching influence in its change on the furnishing scheme of the modern home. Take, for illustration, the kitchen which was formerly a colorless room with a table, a few chairs, and the stove of whatever kind it might have been.

Today, the modern kitchen radiates a warm hospitality and invigorating atmosphere of labor-saving convenience with its built-in appurtenances to lighten the task of the housekeeper, as well as its kitchen cabinet, its electric refrigerator, its washing machine, and inlaid linoleum floor covering which gives this room a touch of color and brightness of which it has traditionally been signed in the past. Even the chairs are decorated, and sometimes the breakfast table.

Then consider the dining room which formerly was furnished in a comparatively plain manner. Today, it is one of the most appealing rooms of the house with its china closet, its serving wagons, buffets, and artistic hardwood chairs and tables. These sets and single pieces are made in conformity to a uniform standard of finish to harmonize perfectly with certain floor effects and sidewall effects.

REQUIRES JUDGMENT.

Naturally, judgment is still required to select the right kind of suite for one's particular interior decorative effect, but the point is that, whereas, twenty years ago, the home-furnisher was obliged to adapt decorations to the furniture or overlook harmonious blends of color entirely, today, she is able to find a finish and style of furniture to suit any decorative caprice that possesses her.

Furniture fashions have undergone a complete change in the past twenty years—indeed, many of the most popular favorite pieces have been evolved during the last few years. Among these may be mentioned the useful and artistic gate leg tables, certain types of sewing tables, console servers, tea wagons, Cogswell chairs, Windsor chairs and the new divans.

The secret of having a beautiful home consists in the judgment one displays in choosing from the alluring variety of attractive sets and single pieces those things which will look best in the rooms in which they are to be installed. It is not necessary, nor desirable, that the entire furnishings of the home should be of the same pattern. Among the paragons of finely-furnished homes, one finds many in which furniture style is different throughout, creating an original and pleasing effect.

But all this must not be construed to mean that it costs a lot to own a finely furnished home, for the truth of the matter is that the cost of the new and better furniture is relatively lower than that of the old.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Gretchen Magdalen Brown Weds James Crossan Chaplin, 3rd, in Simple Ceremony at Old South Church

MISS GRETCHEN MAGDALEN BROWN, blond, pretty and bride of importance to hold today's central place, was charming in nuptial white as she exchanged marriage vows with James Crossan Chaplin, 3d, before the altar of the Old South Church.

DIGNITY AND SIMPLICITY marked the bridal arrangement—insofar as simplicity can mark such an important ceremonial and such a lengthy processional as passed up the flower-decked aisle.

THREE MATRONS of honor, Mesdames Philip K. Brown, Jonathan Brown, 3d, and William Jackson Griffith, Jr. (Brown Mehard of Sewickley, Pa.) moved before the bride. Likewise, Miss Ellen Halliday of Yonkers, New York, as honor maid, and six bridesmaids.

THESE LAST are the Misses Evelyn Windeler, Mary Louise Butterfield, Mary Fitzgerald, a pretty Boston trio; Miss Martha Brooks of Sewickley, Miss Saraline Otis of Chicago and Miss Helen Hart of Montreal.

GREEN AND WHITE at the church and yellow in a tawny tone at the Hotel Somerset for the reception, was an effective plan of decoration. And the choice of chiffon velvet in French nude for bride's attendants, the bride herself in clear white provided a specially lovely picture.

LUSTROUS CHIFFON velvet traced in pearls, the train following wraplike lines, and the veil of exquisite Belgian lace having a history all its own mounted on tulle and bound by a pearl bandeau were bridal details of more than satisfying beauty.

ATTENDANTS WORE gowns and hats exactly alike, the first of chiffon velvet, long-sleeved and with a flat bow at the waist, the second of soft felt, large and graceful and of the portrait variety.

THE DEBUTANTE pinwheel, in its bright whirring, sends off many a spark. Miss Katherine Hedge, bud daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Hedges of Brookline, makes her bow via the tea route, and for the tea table enrolls sister Junior Leaguers of the probationary set.

MISS JANE STRICKLAND is in charge, and the Misses Christine Dolliver, Dorothea Heath, Louise Russell, Marjorie Morrill, Carolyn Rogers, Elizabeth Gardiner, Alice Graves, Gladys Bigelow, Rachel Jackson, Eleanor Perkins, Anita Potts, Madeline Post and Katherine Weeks are in the bevy.

ALSO MISS ADELE KIRKBRIDE. Miss Elizabeth Heath, Miss Mary Frances Oakes and Miss Sally Knowles. Miss Katherine Wood, a Vassar student, also serves at the rite of the teacup.

MR. AND MRS. HEDGE are entertaining informally for dinner in honor of their daughter, and this evening everyone goes on to the Dedham Polo and Hunt Club for the dance Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gray give for Mrs. Gray's niece, Marian Stanwood.

SHE IS A DAUGHTER of the Phillip C. Stanwoods of Boston and Washington, who are making their home in Boston, on Beacon Hill, during their daughter's first Winter. Mrs. Stanwood and Mrs. Gray are sisters.

SURROUNDED By fragrant blossoms, floral tribute to the bud, Mrs. Hedge in golden brown lace over apricot, and the debutante in white satin with tulle flutings, a true jeune fille frock untouched by soon. Miss Stanwood's dance frock, likewise a French expression of simplicity, was of seashell pink with gold.

A DINNER PRECEDES the dance for Miss Stanwood and winds up the week successfully for all the local debutantes who do not journey to the North Shore for Mrs. Charles P. Curtis' dinner dance for Miss Harriet Bangs, her niece.

THE WEDDING DAY of Miss Georgina Lawrence Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Tileston Wells, and Courtlandt Schuyler Van Rensselaer, is a red-letter event down at pretty little Osterville on Cape Cod.

LOCAL REPRESENTATION is carried thereto by Mrs. Howland Seabury (Rosamond Johnson) as honor matron and cousin of the bride. Mrs. Seabury, as lovely a bride as Boston's smart set ever gazed upon, will be a most ornamental figure in the entourage.

SHE WEARS a rose brocade woven with silver, and the same metal glints from the bride's robes, a picture-like creation of cobweb lace over silver cloth. It is a gown of mystical suggestion, with straight long lines and unique arrangement of the veil.

MR. AND MRS. SEABURY went down to Cape Cod yesterday, in season for the large dinner-dance Mr. and Mrs. Tileston Wells gave for their daughter and the bridegroom-elect at the Seabutt Club, that smartest of Cape organizations.

THE WEDDING is celebrated at the Manor House, Summer home of the Rev. Andrew Chalmers Wilson and Mrs. Wilson, god-parents of the bride. Mr. Van Rensselaer, he of the triple inheritance of old Dutch patroon names, is junior in the Courtlandt Van Rensselaer family of New York and Bar Harbor.

WHILE the staying-at-home set finds a full program in bride, weddings and bazaars, those whose favorite diversion is taking ship for foreign shores are away across the Atlantic in interesting numbers.

CURLEY URGES RAPID TRANSIT TO NORTH

By JAMES CURLEY
Former Mayor of Boston.

The expenditure in 1922-23 of $3,000,000 for the enlargement of transportation facilities at Maverick Square, marked the initial step in a comprehensive program of future transportation facilities to the north of Boston.

The extension of East Boston tunnel to connect with the rails and roadbed of the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad would immediately result in the establishment of a rapid transit circuit to the north through which it would be possible to reduce the running time between Lynn and Center in either points 50 per cent.

J. M. Curley

The savings in time to the traveling public in shifting these facilities, numbering close to 1,000,000 daily at present, would be equivalent to an annual saving of 150,000,000 hours on a 300-hour working basis.

This, on an estimate of sixty cents per hour, would represent an annual saving approximating $9,000,000 to the traveling public using northern facilities. That is a matter of sufficient economic importance seriously to consider.

AUTO MAKES PROBLEM.

When the Boylston street subway was constructed there was little traffic interference with cars leaving the subway at Kenmore station, but the advent of automobiles for pleasure purposes has produced a situation at that point which is well-nigh intolerable at present, and it is rapidly growing worse.

I advised authority from the Legislature to extend the Boylston street subway out Commonwealth avenue and Beacon street in order to eliminate this congested and hazardous grade crossing. When this has been accomplished there will be a tremendous saving in time for car riders on Beacon street and Commonwealth avenue who are now seriously delayed by vehicular congestion at Kenmore station.

This will be the first step in the ultimate substitution of trains for surface cars in Boylston street subway, for which it was originally designed, as it will be possible by the construction of an underground station at Kenmore to turn back the Beacon street surface cars at that point.

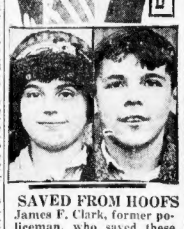
OUTSIDE FARE LIMIT.

Since the annexation of Hyde Park to the city of Boston, there was constant agitation for adjustment of street car fare, as Hyde Park was the only section of Boston outside of the single fare limit.

The situation was complicated by the fact that all the lines in Hyde Park were owned by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company. For years various commissions agreed that residents of Hyde Park were entitled to relief but they didn't get it as neither the Boston Elevated nor the Eastern Massachusetts would agree to division of a single fare.

(Concluding Instalment Monday)

Runaway Hero



SAVED FROM HOOFS
James F. Clark, former policeman, who saved these two children, Mary and Edwin Ketterle, No. 280 East Ninth street, South Boston, from the path of a team of runaway horses at Mercer and East Ninth streets.

In 1923, I advocated and had passed a bill which authorized the City of Boston to acquire ownership of all the tracks in Hyde Park belonging to the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company and a lease of the greater portion of this trackage to the Boston Elevated Railway Company at a rental which would include interest charges and a substantial amount for a sinking fund.

This gave to the Hyde Park district a ten cent fare instead of the twenty cent fares charged previously, and, as a result of this reduction in fare Hyde Park has become one of our important industrial centers because of the many excellent steam railroad freight connections.

In 1924, I obtained passage of an act providing for the construction of a new station on the Cambridge subway-Dorchester tunnel line at the corner of Charles and Cambridge streets, which will give excellent transportation facilities to that section of the city proper, now rapidly growing because of the widening of Cambridge street between that point and Scollay square.

RAPS FIN. COM. ON SCHOOL CHARGE

School committee members were irate today at the charges brought by the Finance Commission that the position of sanitary inspector in the school hygiene department was created for John M. Sullivan, brother of Edward M. Sullivan, member of the school board.

Particularly incensed was Edward M. Sullivan, who considers the Fin Com's charges a direct attack upon himself.

"Should my brother be penalized because he is my brother," said Committeeman Sullivan today.

"If there were ten necessary positions open and I had ten brothers who proved themselves best qualified for the positions I should not hesitate to approve their appointments. My sole interest is in the health and welfare of the children in the schools of Boston.

"Charles L. Carr of the Fin. Com., an attorney, and Corporation Counsel Frank S. Deland say that the creation of the office was illegal.

"These two men would do well to make a study of the statutes. Do they know that before the school hygiene department was created there was no health agency in the city of Boston that had the care of the schools within its province?

"My brother took the examination for the city health department and stood at the top of the list of 90 applicants."

TRIBUTE TO AIRMAN WHO DIED ON DUTY

Final tribute to Lt. Michael F. McGrath, Reserve aviator, who died at Colorado Springs of injuries received in line of duty, was paid today by brother officers. A formation of airplanes from the Boston Airport in command of Regular Army officers and manned by brother officers of the dead airman circled over Allston while the remains of Lt. McGrath were being laid to rest.

At the same time preparations were being made to pay fitting tribute to Lt. William H. Preston, Jr., of Belmont and Lt. Henry R. Perra of Taunton, Reserve flyers, who died when their planes plunged into Long Island Sound. Their bodies were sent home from Mitchel Field, N. Y.

CHRISTMAS CLUB CHECKS WILL GO OUT EARLIER

The Retail Trade Board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce announced today that Boston banks will distribute their Christmas Club checks two weeks earlier this year. Five reasons are given, comprising better selections of merchandise in the stores, better service, less strain on store employes and postal clerks, and a gain by banks because of the tendency to turn back some of their money by depositors.

40 AWARDS FOR HOMEMAKERS AROUND HUB

Question No. 3 of the Martha Lee Homemakers' Contest is printed today.

If you haven't already joined the race, start today. There are 33 questions in all, one for each day of publication until Saturday, November 20, 1926. The questions are simple, dealing with everyday problems of the home.

One thousand dollars will be given away to the lucky winners. Five hundred dollars goes to the woman adjudged first prize winner.

HOLD YOUR ANSWERS.

One hundred and fifty dollars goes to the winner of the second prize. Then comes the third prize of $15, the fourth of $30 and the fifth of $20. Then prizes of $10 each will go to the next ten winners, and $5 checks for the twenty-five whose sets are almost as good.

Now for the third question.

Should tough meat be cooked slowly or quickly?

Wait for the last question before sending any of your answers in. No offerings will be considered until the last question has been printed and the complete sets are before the judges. November 20 is the day on which to mail you sets. Address them to the Homemaker's Contest Judges, Boston Evening American, P. O. Box 110, Boston, Mass.

Miss Alice Bradley, principal of Miss Farmer's School of Cookery, Mrs. Ida M. Hebbard, president of the Housekeepers' League, and Martha Lee, household economist of the Boston Evening American, will judge the sets of answers, when the final day arrives.

This contest is open to everyone except employes or families of employes of the Boston Evening American and affiliated newspapers.

It is not necessary for a contestant to purchase the Boston Evening American. Tracings of the coupons can be made.

Al Jolson Wants to Do "Hamlet".

New ambitions seize Al Jolson regularly. The latest lure in the life of the famous blackface comedian is to play Hamlet, and to prove that he means business he promises to give an audience at the Shubert an afterpiece some matinee in the shape of the well known soliloquy.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Makes Faces at Cracked Mirrors.

Superstition has no terrors for Claire Luce of the Follies, who dances nightly in the hall of 3,300 mirrors. She has become so accustomed, she says, to seeing her own reflection at so many odd angles that one mirror, more or less broken, means nothing to her.

OLD PLAYS' HOLD OVER---NOTHING NEW IN PROSPECT DOWN TOWN FOR ANOTHER WEEK

A WOMAN'S WORK, grave sirs, is never done. But "Craig's Wife" at the New Park did hers so well that nobody else could stand her, so Anne Sutherland and Josephine Williams (and hubby, too) leave the little lady flat.

"THE HONOR OF THE FAMILY" is worth fighting for when it concerns this fair leading lady, Jessie Royce Landis. Her hero believes so, for he comes to her rescue at each performance.

RUTH ELAINE makes "The Student Prince" at the Majestic something to be admired pictorially. And you can't beat the singing. It leaves a "harmonious echo in this discordant life."

REPO' DE WAH. Gladys Brown, as she appears in the crimpy crinoline episode of the sunny South in Al Jolson's "Big Boy" at the Shubert.

WITH MOCK HUMILITY, Roland Young seizes the hem of Ina Claire's skirt in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" and attempts to tell her he's her abject object—or something "smart" like that.

POLLOCK IS DRAMA'S BRIGHT ALTRUIST

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THERE are wide divergences in the mental deportment of American dramatists. With most of them, when a play is written and a manager has been found to produce it, the author's task is considered finished. Following the line of least resistance he usually assumes a receptive attitude and awaits returns. That is the dramatist the theatre knows best. But there are others of the specie who consider a play is only half done when it is written and only two-thirds completed when produced. Playwrights of this class are few—but they are energetic.

It is a meagre list that makes up this latter group, but it is exceedingly rugged at the top—rugged in thought and in physical vigor. Which is, perhaps, as good a way as any to lead up to Channing Pollock, whose exertions before, during and after one of his plays bursts into bloom mark him as the real leader of the new school of making the theatre hustle. Pollock originated the idea that a playwright might just as well have a hand in producing as in writing and, by similar reasoning, insisting that a play worth writing and staging is well worth a little privately conducted salesmanship upon an anxious public.

BELIEVE it or not, Channing Pollock has passed well beyond the artistic limits where writing is done only for the glory of the box office. Of course, he wrote "The Fool" to expound a momentous idea and, in defiance of the regular order of such things, it brought great profit to the family strong box. When such things do occur, Mr. Pollock complacently accepts the inevitable and contents himself with a simple audit of the weekly statements. In the case of "The Enemy," now at the Plymouth, he confesses to purely altruistic ambitions. He is more interested in the influence of his drama upon the minds of thinking people than upon vulgar trade considerations. He led me by the arm into a corner and declared this was the naked truth.

STILL clinging to an ancient doctrine that the theatre may teach as well as amuse, Mr. Pollock, thoroughly stirred by his own personal observation of war horrors and suffering non-combatants, now proposes to utilize his own gifts in a grand campaign to promote the general proposition that the brotherhood of man is more important than ecstatic flag waving. For demonstrated patriotism, as indicated in hip-hip-hurrahing and preparedness parades, he possesses a very icy heart. Upon his own admission, if the well worn Pollock typewriter does its full duty, he hopes to scuttle the ship of hate and envy and make brothers of us all.

AND all this from a man who, as late as 1922, gathered an ample and honest living writing fluffy comedy for those who could use it. You might say that Mr. Pollock wrote very fluffy comedy, for it was in 1922 that the author of "The Fool" and "The Enemy" gave Mr. Ziegfeld one of the snappiest catch-as-catch-can books ever devised for the digestion of the well-known tired business man. "But I'll never do it again," Pollock declared. "Working for the Follies taught me the error of my literary ways. My sins having found me out, I am now on the repenters' seat for all time. In the future I shall write only for the good I can spread and not for mere laughs and emolument. Oh, yes, I can afford it—now."

IT naturally might be asked whether Channing Pollock is playwright, producer or press agent. As a matter of cold, hard truth he is a master at each trade, and to show that he knows what is taking place on all sides of the game, he once served faithfully and brilliantly as the dramatic critic of the Washington Post. Pollock now is a man of deep purpose and he hopes that his voice, crying out in the wilderness, may be heard and answered. Not only would he abolish war with a single stroke of his clanking typewriter, but he would make the theatre an open house for those who cannot afford to pay current Broadway and Tremont street prices. The Pollock remedy in this case is a chain of dollar playhouses. Anyway, he's the champion of some mighty attractive new ideas.

Yiddish Players Have Hit in "Orphans of the Street"

"Orphans of the Street," a thrilling melodrama shown for the first time in Boston last Tuesday evening at the Grand Opera House by Julius Nathanson's Yiddish Art Players, will be repeated this afternoon and evening and also during next week. "Orphans of the Street" is being greeted with enthusiasm and seems destined to record itself as the biggest dramatic treat of the Yiddish season in Boston. The play is from the pen of William Siegel, one of the ablest of the younger Yiddish playwrights. It ran for 24 weeks in New York City last season.

WHAT'S WHAT With Shows REMAINING

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

"The Enemy" at the Plymouth. (Second week.) Channing Pollock's view of war, with special reference to women and children.

"The Student Prince" at the Majestic. (Second week.) Merriest of operetta, with inspiring melody and rich humor.

Otis Skinner in "The Honor of the Family" at the Hollis. (Third week.) Napoleonic drama of the good old sort. One last week.

"Craig's Wife" at the New Park. (Third week.) To the harassed Craig it is just a case of marrying in haste and repenting at leisure.

* * *

Ina Claire in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" at the Tremont. (Third week.) In which two excellent crooks enter English society.

* * *

Ziegfeld Follies at the Colonial. (Fourth week.) Just what a Follies is expected to be—an exposition in lingerie.

Al Jolson in "Big Boy" at the Shubert. (Birth week.) The unsurpassed Mr. Jolson in a whirlwind of frolic and song.

Grant Mitchell in "One of the Family" at the Wilbur. (Third week.) Keep up with the Adamses presents its own problems.

"John the Baptist" at the Repertory. (Second week.) Sudermann's solemn drama of the virtuous John and the naughty Salome.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

COPLEY—"At Mrs. Beam's," a comedy in four acts by C. K. Munro. First time in Boston. Originally presented by the Theatre Guild in New York, where it followed a prosperous course. The action takes place in a London lodging house. In the cast are Edith Harcourt, Millicent Hallatt, Evelyn Carter, Nan Marriott-Watson, May Ediss, Madeline Grande, Joan Cary, E. E. Clive, Alan Mowbray and Richard Wherlf.

CASTLE SQUARE—"Simon Called Peter," a dramatization by Jules Eckert Goodman of Robert Keable's novel of the same name. A story of the World War that deals with the souls of men rather than with their fighting qualities. Jean Oliver and Gavin Gordon head the cast, supported by Thelma White, Jack Marvin, Gene Cleveland, Rankin Mansfield, Hal Chase and Thomas Magrane.

To the Romantic Mr. Young Life Is One Sweet Song

The life of Halfred Young, playing the title role in "The Student Prince" at the Majestic, seems to be all romance. Born in Portland, Oregon, 24 years ago, he came to New York, won the Eastman scholarship, entitling him to a year's tuition and $30 a week in the opera department of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester. Then he sang with Percy Grainger in New York and J. J. Shubert heard his voice and signed him to play "Detlef" in "The Student Prince" in Chicago. The leading tenor fell ill, Young went on as his understudy and made an instant hit; so he finished the remainder of the Chicago engagement in the leading role. Last Summer he opened "The Great Temptations," the new Shubert revue, and with Hazel Dawn popularized "Valencia," the European song hit.

Another Kaufman Satire On the Business Man

That play producers also may have a keen sense of humor is proved by Crosby Gaige's production of "The Butter and Egg Man," the George S. Kaufman comedy which comes to the Plymouth on Monday evening, October 25. For "The Butter and Egg Man" is nothing more or less than an unblushing satire on the "angel" element in theatrical life. A youth from Grand Chiselothe, with a small fortune tucked in his inside pocket and a burning desire to make more money in a hurry, is tapped by two Rialto rogues who have on their hands a decrepit play called "Her Lesson." The Kaufman satire plays fast and loose with this game of chance and with the hopes, schemes and vanities of producers and players.

Gregory Kelly, who plays the title role, and Isabel Lamon are the featured members of the cast.

LUCRETIA GODDARD, 17-year-old prima donna who makes her debut with Signor Grilli in "Faust," Monday night at the Opera House.

Next Week With San Carlo

The opera bills for next week are: Monday night, Faust, with Lucretia Goddard (debut) as Marguerite; Tuesday night, Cavalleria and Pagliacci; Wednesday matinee, Martha, with Consuelo Escobar; Wednesday night, La Tosca, with Gladys Axman and Lorenzo Conati; Thursday night, La Gioconda, with Clara Jacobo and Franco Tafuro; Friday night, Lucia, with Tina Paggi; Saturday matinee, Carmen, with Margherita Sylva, and Saturday night Aida, with Clara Jacobo and Stella De Metie.

Fast Fading Footwear Is Dancer's Big Problem

New dancing slippers at every performance are required by Dorothy Hodac, specialty dancer in Al Jolson's "Big Boy" show at the Shubert. Eight pairs a week! Miss Hodac's slippers are made of flesh colored satin, and the soles are of imported birchbark, which is thin and pliable and very easy on the feet. This bark is stripped and cured by the Irish peasants in Killarney, and has been used there for generations in making boot soles. Only recently was it introduced for stage purposes. Every season brings a new material for ballet slippers, but birchbark is the very latest. They are hand made and stitched with silk thread. After one performance they become soft and soiled and are useless for further ballet dancing. The cast-off slippers are given to the chorus girls, who wear them for their weekly rehearsals.

Looking Ahead

OCTOBER 23—
W. C. Fields in "So's Your Old Man" at the Metropolitan.

OCTOBER 25—
"The Butter and Egg Man" at the Plymouth.
"The Wisdom Tooth" at the Hollis.

OCTOBER 30—

NOVEMBER 1—
"Beau Geste," a Paramount feature, at the Tremont.

NOVEMBER 6—
Ray Griffith in "You'd Be Surprised" at the Metropolitan.

DEL DESTINO DELIGHTS AT OPERA

Good singing was the outstanding feature of the performance of Verdi's "La Forza del Destino" by the San Carlo Opera Company at the Boston Opera House last night. This makes the fourth Verdi opera that has been presented this week, but the great Italian master holds his own very well.

"La Forza del Destino," unlike "Rigoletto" and "Aida" which were presented earlier in the week, demands above all first-class singers. The drama is involved and impossible, the situations often absurd and taxing the credulity of the onlooker. But the arias are often lovely, and with the proper voices the show is saved.

The San Carlo Company was fortunate in its cast for this opera. All of the principal singers were in good voice. Leading the list was Bianca Saroya, the stately prima donna with the rich voice. Her work last night as Leonora was even more enjoyable than it was in Boheme on Wednesday, even though the part is vocally much more difficult. She was received by the audience very demonstratively.

Probably the finest singing of the evening, however, was done by a minor character, Pietro Audisio, who acted and sang by Andres Mongelli. Mongelli's splendid bass voice has already called forth praise, but last night he scored notably and exceptionally in the convent scene. There are no gurgles in this voice, only pure, round tones. Even when the volume of the low tones is not big, they carry because of their quality and resonance.

Bernice Schalker, Philine Falco, Natalie Cervi and Francesco Curci contributed to a good performance. The chorus plays an important part in this opera, especially in the convent scene, and here it did excellent work.

EDDIE'S GIFT FOR MIMICRY WINS OUT

Eddie Cantor, who was finally brought into motion pictures by Paramount when plans were made to screen "Kid Boots," is a product of New York City. The same town which fathered Al Smith, Teddy Roosevelt and Jimmy Walker, acted as guardian angel to flimdom's newest comedy star.

He left school at the age of fourteen and landed a job with the National Cloak and Suit Company. One day, while making an inspection tour of his plant, the general manager was very much surprised to see a young man mimicking Sarah Bernhardt on top of a counter.

"I didn't even stop for my coat," says Cantor.

Then Eddie decided the stage was the place for him, and Gus Edwards signed him for his juvenile vaudeville revue. Cantor stayed with Mdwards three years and then crossed the sea to appear in a Charlot revue.

Later Eddie journeyed to New York and joined Florenz Ziegfeld with whom he had remained, excepting two years with the Shubert interests, until signed to "Cantor about" in Ziegfeld's "Kid Boots."

"Kid Boots" in picture form, starts at the Metropolitan today.

KEITH DANCE CONTEST

The Blackbottom dance contest, which will be held every night on the stage of Keith's Theatre next week, has already aroused great interest. The dance itself promises to become more popular than the Charleston. The Dancing Merediths, who come to Boston next week, have offered prize cups to the winners. Dr. George Rockwell, "Quack, Quack," will officiate and act as master of ceremonies.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Believe It or Not; It May Be True.

It is reported that the reason De Wolf Hopper, the elongated comedian of "The Student Prince," has refused a nice motion picture proposition is because, having tried it once, he discovered there was no audience on a Hollywood lot to call for "Casey At The Bat."

McCORMACK LEADS WEEK'S CONCERTS

John McCormack will be the attraction at Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon.

John McCormack

In his first Boston concert of the season he will sing an air from Perl's "Euridice," the first opera ever composed, another air by Bach, two settings of old Chinese poems by the Englishman, Bantock, songs by Rea, Pigni, Elgar and various others. Of course, there will be Irish folk songs by James Liebling, cellist, will be the assisting artist.

The program for the third pair of concerts of the Symphony Orchestra, next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, contains a Haydn Symphony in E flat, No. 1, "Les Rencontres," a suite of ballet pieces by Jacques Ibert, to be played for the first time in America, and four excerpts from Wagner's operas: Prelude to "Lohengrin," The Funeral Music from "Gotterdammerung," Forest Music from "Siegfried," and the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger." The annual concert of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra will be given at Symphony Hall next Thursday evening, October 21. Willem Mengelberg will conduct in the following program: Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, Weber's Overture to "Euryanthe," "Pan and the Priest," by Hanson, and three movements from Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust."

An interesting concert debut is that of Reginald Boardman, pianist, next Tuesday evening, October 19, at Jordan Hall. Mr. Boardman is courageously introducing pieces of Goossens, Castelnuovo-Tedesco, and Bartok for the first time in Boston. He will also play various other modernist pieces and piano classics drawn from Beethoven, Chopin and Liszt.

* * *

Willard Amison, tenor, will be heard in a song recital at Jordan Hall next Thursday evening, October 21. He has a varied and well-rounded program that ranges all the way from seven folk songs from as many nations, to Schumann, Horseman, Taniieff and Rachmaninoff.

The Russian Symphonic Choir, of which Basile Kibalchich is founder and conductor, and which has been remarkably received on its previous visits to Boston, will perform at Symphony Hall next Sunday evening, Oct. 24. A program of great variety, including Russian folk-songs, will be offered.

Mr. Kibalchich organized his first choir shortly before the war and gave it the name of Symphonic Choir, because he built it on the same lines as a symphony orchestra. The group can be heard here next week was organized two years ago and represents the conductor's supreme achievement in applying his principles to choral singing.

Taunton Takes Over the Baton At New Boston

William H. Taunton, former conductor of the 44th Street Theatre, New York City, will lead the Keith-Albee Boston theatre orchestra, beginning Monday.

Mr. Taunton began his musical career in Boston when 18 years old and a student at Harvard college. He played in the Tremont, Globe and Hollis street theatre orchestras as first trombonist.

Leaving Boston, Mr. Taunton toured the country with Sousa's band. At that time Arthur Pryor was featured in the band as the solo trombonist, a position which Mr. Taunton later filled in the same band. He has also served on the faculty of the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Rattling the Skeleton on Russ.

Thirty years ago, when love was young and the goose dangled high, Russ Whytal, the 71-year-old actor who gives a masterly performance as the old professor in Channing Pollock's play, "The Enemy," was a matinee idol in the old Boston Museum stock company.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Wise Crack from Eddie Cantor.

Now that he has become a famous picture star, Eddie Cantor, who will be seen in "Kid Boots" at the Metropolitan, rises to remark that from his own personal observation "a successful movie producer is a guy who will stand for what the public will fall for."

MARIE PREVOST TO TOP WOODS' FARCE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—"Getting Gertie's Garter," washed clean of its stage sins, is going into the movies. When it is presented in its unexpurgated edition I cannot say whether it will resemble A. H. Woods' sprightly farce. The movies have a way of removing all suggestiveness and making their product fit for the children.

Marie Prevost, who specializes in these semi-naughty heroines, has been invited to play Gertie. E. Mason Hopper has been chosen by Metropolitan to direct "Getting Gertie's Garter" from a script written by F. McGrew Willis.

• • •

GLORIA SWANSON EXPECTS to take an extended trip around the world. Her contract calls for two pictures a year, but she plans to get enough work ahead to permit her to take a rest and vacation.

Gloria Swanson

She will have to work faster than she has been working on "Sunya." Although production started a month ago, I am told, her leading man, John Boles, has not appeared in a single scene.

"The Battalion of Death," originally slated to follow "Sunya" may be discarded in favor of an original by Arthur Stringer.

THE SENNETT BATHING BEAUTIES can always land a job. Alyce Day, the young lady claimed to be one of the Sennett pulchritudinous beauties, has been engaged to play opposite Raymond Griffith in "The Waiter From the Ritz."

She is the young lady Carl Laemmle, Jr., is said to admire. I suppose from now on every girl young Laemmle sends a box of candy to will be listed as his fiancee.

• • •

BEATRICE LILLIE has finished her picture, "Exit Smiling," for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and if it is half as funny as reports indicate she will be! a feminine Eddie Cantor.

That, my dear friends, means a film discovery. Bee writes some of her friends that she expects to be in town in about a week. She is due to rehearse in a Dillingham play.

MAURICE STILLER has made only one picture on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, but he seems to be doing fairly well for himself with Paramount. He has just finished "Hotel Imperial," Pola Negri's next film, and as a reward of merit he has been given a new contract.

Stiller is on his way East to confer with Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky and Emil Jennings, which means that of course he will direct Jannings' first American-made picture. By the by, the German actor lands today.

NILES WELCH IS TO BE MARRIED TOMORROW. He chose for his bride Elaine Gholson, an actress on the speaking stage.

At one time Niles was one of the most popular leading men in the films, but he seems to have been devoting his talents to the stage in the last few months.

• • •

SOME TIME THESE STARS OF YESTERDAY disappear and turn up smiling in unexpected places. Here we have Helene Chadwick, who I hear from the coast is to appear in "Too Many Kisses," a Columbia production.

So far the only member of the cast is Gustov, a 28-inch dwarf borrowed from Al G. Barnes circus in Mississippi.

FREE-LANCING SEEMS TO HAVE HAD no bad effects on Lilyan Tashman. She received a telegram from Associated First National offering her a part in a coming production.

She and her husband, Edmund Lowe, are down on Wednesday and Thursday afternoon were on their way to the coast. Lowe will finish exteriors in "One Increasing Purpose" and Lilyan to talk over the First National offer with John McCormick.

It Was a Windy Day When Mr. Keaton First Blew In

Buster Keaton, screen comedian, whose latest film, "Battling Butler," is at the Orpheum next week, ought to be good in more than one sense, for he was born in a Kansas church on November 4, 1895.

The town in which he made his worldly debut isn't even on the map today. A cyclone put it in the missing column, and they've never taken the trouble to build it.

Father and Mother Keaton and Harry Houdini, now the famous magician and escape artist, were touring the country with a tent show on the night before Buster was born. a cyclone made away with the tent The only clergyman in the village a Catholic priest, heard of the visitors' plight and of the expected visit of the stork. He volunteered to go for a doctor, and suggested that Joe Keaton bring his wife to the tiny church.

Mrs. Keaton was taken into the sacristy. There the priest and the doctor found the troupers, and there Buster Keaton was brought into the world.

Stage Fright Bothers, But Does Not Subdue Her

May Ediss, one of the leading Copley players, confesses, even at this point of her long experience on the stage, that she still has moments of stage fright.

May Ediss

"To have stage fright and still be able to act before an audience without having it found out," Miss Ediss said, "is the most difficult task I know of. From my first appearance before an audience I have been fighting against stage fright and a consciousness that a thousand or more eyes are directed on me as I speak my lines; and although I somehow am able to control my inner-most self, while acting, I never forget I am frightened."

Miss Ediss, who speaks so frankly about her one weakness on the stage which is not, fortunately, evident to the audience, has established herself as one of the favorites of Bostonian theatre-goers.

New Film Boasts Unusual Gathering of Girls

Hollywood has become the modern Mecca for American artists, according to John Francis Dillon, First National producer. His picture at the Washington St. Olympia next week, "Don Juan's Three Nights," called for many gorgeous girls, from adolescent youth to full blooming womanhood. All, accept ted types were represented. The typical Saxon blonde, was Gertrude Astor. The dark-haired Alma Bennett contrasted with slender Madeline Burlock, languorous, slow-eyed olive skinned daughter of the old South. The fiery, flashing Latin type, Natalie Kingston, completed the trio of brunette types who had the leading parts. The typical American flapper was Shirley Mason —electrically active, boyish, slim, petite and pretty. Maltzer, in full blooming womanhood, Myrtle Steadman has everything that the artist could desire in the dashing wife or widow type. Artistry of the most exacting sort could demand no wider field than the galaxy of girls gathered within the sets of this one production.

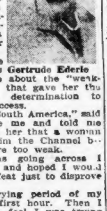
TRUDY COMES MONDAY TO THE STATE

Determination perhaps more than physical strength carried Gertrude Ederle through to achieve the enviable distinction of being the first of her sex to swim the treacherous English Channel.

Miss Ederle comes to Loew's State next week to reveal her aquatic presentation with Helen Wainwright and Aileen Riggin in two diving champions, and incidentally to demonstrate just how she won her Channel battle.



Miss Ederle says that it was Gertrude Ederle the eternal joke about the "weakness of women" that gave her the inspiration and determination to "carry on" to success.

"A girl from South America," said "Trudy," "wrote me and told me that a man told her that a woman would never swim the Channel because women are too weak.

"When I was going across I thought of that and hoped I would accomplish the feat just to disprove that fallacy.

"The most trying period of my swim was the first hour. Then I thought what a fool I was trying to swim all that distance. I though't the 14 or 18 hours that it would take, and then said to myself, 'Oh well, might as well go through with it.' And when I was through I wasn't tired a bit."

WHO'S WHO AND ALL THAT

Claire Luce, with the Follies at the Colonial, although only nineteen, has been featured in several Broadway successes and was actually successor to the famous Mistinguett in Paris before making her first appearance in her own country. Her first showing on Broadway was a specialty dancer in "Little Jesse James", after which she appeared successively in "Dear Sir" and in the Music Box Revue. Mr. Ziegfeld selected her for "Palm Beach Nights" in which she displayed so much acrobatic dexterity that she was immediately assigned to the Follies.

Fashion Parade Features Bill at Central Square

The Central Square Theatre in Cambridge offers its patrons an unusually diversified entertainment in pictures and stage features for the new week. Starting Monday, the photoplay will be the smart comedy, "The Waning Sex," starring Norma Shearer and Conrad Nagel. On the stage the Alexander & Olsen Revue, host to vaudeville acts with their clown "afterpiece." As an added attraction, a fashion show of Fall furs by living models will be given for the entire week. Beginning Thursday, the photoplay feature will be "The Gods," with Tom Meighan, and the Dave Schooler Company will lead the vaudeville.

Al Jolson isn't his real name—It's Asa Yoleson. The blackface comedian at the Shubert made his first appearance on the stage at the age of thirteen in Zanesville's "Children of the Ghetto." Later he joined Al Reeve's burlesque show and following a hard season went into vaudeville with his brother and another actor. He turned to burnt cork when a chance came to join the Dockstader Minstrels. J. J. Shubert induced Jolson to leave minstrelsy for musical shows in 1911 and he still is in the Shubert fold.

LEGINSKA CONCERT

Renewed proof of the energy of Ethel Leginska lies in the announcement of her scheduled performance of the piano part of Schumann's E flat Quintet with the New York String Quartet at their concert Saturday, Oct. 23, at Jordan Hall; while the next day she will lead the newly-formed Boston Philharmonic Orchestra in its initial concert at Mechanics Hall, in addition to conducting Miss Leginska will play the piano solo in Liszt's Hungarian Fantasia for piano and orchestra.

PHYSICIAN IN FUN COMES TO KEITH'S

How to live to be 150 years old? Don't drink, don't smoke, don't go to parties, don't eat sweets or rich foods of any kind.

"And then," asserts "Dr." Rockwell, headlining at B. F. Keith's next week, "you may not actually live to be one hundred and fifty, but at least it will seem that long."

"Dr." Rockwell, remembered as a member of the comedy team, Rockwell and Fox, this year has essayed vaudeville as a "single" and has been busy stopping shows since the day of his debut in the role of his own creation, "Dr. Rockwell, Quack, Quack!"

His present act consists of a burlesque "health lecture," and it is proving one of the riotous successes of the season. A number of years ago when Rockwell was one of Providence's budding clitizens, he began and continued for several consecutive months the study of medicine. This brief acquaintance with the world of pills and powders affords him a basis of actual fact upon which he builds a clever discourse of hokum. And tucked in amid his jests is a modicum of sage advice

MISSING RADIO MAN IN AIMEE CASE FOUND

Chicago, Oct. 16 (I.N.S.).—Kenneth Ormiston, the long-sought central figure in the Aimee Semple McPherson investigation, was located in Chicago today by International News Service through Edward H. S. Martin, the Chicago attorney who represents the missing radio man of Los Angeles Temple, where he worked for the evangelist before he was accused of occupying a "love nest" with her at Carmel-by-the-Sea in California.

Ormiston today sent by messenger to Martin a letter addressed to Asa Keyes, district attorney of Los Angeles and prosecutor of conspiracy charges against the evangelist, telling Keyes that he could "save Los Angeles County a lot of money" by giving up the "nation-wide hunt" for Aimee's radio man.

KEYES WARNED.

In the letter Ormiston informed the district attorney that any letter, telegram, telephone message of any communication whatsoever, purporting to be from him was a fraud unless it came through Martin, his Chicago attorney.

Ormiston denied he had recently been in Winnipeg and said in other places and said he had not been in Los Angeles since June 24.

The radio man said in the letter to Keyes he could not understand why he had been referred to as a "fugitive from justice." Ormiston wrote that he had committed no crime "in Los Angeles or any other place."

WILL APPEAR WHEN READY.

Martin said the letter from Ormiston would be sent immediately to Keyes in Los Angeles. The attorney intimated that he did not know Ormiston's exact place of residence in Chicago.

Ormiston, for whom a warrant has been issued in connection with the amazing investigation of the alleged kidnaping hoax of Mrs. McPherson, indicated in the letter he had no intention of "being taken" by the law and that he would appear in the case only when he got good and ready.

Tucson Woman Will Testify in Aimee Case

Los Angeles, Oct. 16 (I.N.S.).—Breaking into the customary Saturday holiday, a session of the preliminary hearing of Aimee Semple McPherson will be held today, the final day of the third week of the hearing.

Judge Blake ordered the session today for the purpose of giving the defense an opportunity to introduce Mrs. Gayle Koontz of Tucson, who will testify that she, and not the evangelist, sent a telegram from Gila Bend, Ariz., on June 12, ten days before Mrs. McPherson stumbled into Agua Prieta, claiming to have escaped from a desert shack.

HANDSOME HERO IN TENDER TOTING

A BONNIE BURDEN is Mary Astor, sustained and soothed by an unfaltering champion, who, like that great go-getter, Gunga Dhin, is ready to "fetch and carry one till the longest day is done." It all happens in "Don Juan," coming to the Colonial, October 25, and the charming champ chap is John Barrymore.

VITAPHONE IS READY FOR BOSTON

The silence of the motion picture screen has been broken, for now comes an amazing new invention, Vitaphone.

Through its medium, the great operatic and concert stars, musicians, speakers and entertainers need never die. This will be demonstrated Wednesday evening, October 27th, at the Colonial, when Warner Brothers introduce to Boston this latest achievement of science.

In its present state of development, this instrument does not enable the characters in a photoplay to speak the lines of the story, but it can and does reproduce the work of a great orchestra as an accompaniment, thereby greatly enhancing the dramatic value of the picture.

Vitaphone will be the feature of a double program at the Colonial. It will first be presented as a prologue, offering Marion Talley, Giovanni Martinelli, Anna Case, the Metropolitan Opera Company Chorus and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra of 107, conducted by Henry Hadley. And it will then provide the musical accompaniment for the showing of John Barrymore's latest motion picture production, "Don Juan," rendering the score as played by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

WILD REVEL IS STEPHENSON'S VICTORY FETE

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 15.—A drunken revel at D. C. Stephenson's home celebrated the political "funeral" of John R. Williams, State Highway Commissioner of Indiana, Court Asher relates in the eighth of his stories exposing Ku Klux Klan operations in the Hoosier State.

By COURT ASHER

D. C. Stephenson stood to win or lose, not one million, but millions of dollars, depending on whether the legislature obeyed orders and passed the "road zipper bill"—an act abolishing the state highway commission and creating a private holding company that would absolutely control all purchases of supplies by the State and all contracts for State work.

John D. Williams, State Director of Highways, was the one obstacle in Stephenson's path. Williams refused to resign. "Steve" arranged for his indictment.

When all was in readiness, a third meeting of the "the gang" was held in Stephenson's office. Among those present, a high Republican chairman, a district chairman, an investigator for the prosecutor's office, and an official from the internal revenue collector's office.

TALKS ON PHONE.

"Steve" opened the "meeting" by calling the State House via telephone.

"Is this —— speaking?" he asked when the connection was made. A moment later he turned to those present and said:

"Boys, —— is a the indictment is ready. He says it was drawn up in the library of the Supreme Court by the boys over there. They certainly are having regular judges over there at the State House.

"He says that they have prepared indictments against Williams charging him with stealing anvils. He, me, I, to me, stealing anvils. I'm going to get the judge to impound all of the records—that ought to help, eh?

"Then Steve made a speech. As I remember it, it went something like this:

"Boys, victory again has perched upon our banners—we won—I'll soon have Williams out of the way. Then we will be in absolute control of the State.

PLENTY FOR ALL.

"There'll be plenty for all—every one who stands by me now will share the fruits of victory with me. I've worked myself to the bone to perfect an organization. There were times when I thought the job a hopeless one. But now—now we've won. We're on top, sitting on top of the world—I want you all to come to a little celebration tomorrow night at my place—a funeral. It will be the political funeral of the late Mr. John Williams. He's dead right now, and I'm going to bury him in my back yard—"

The funeral was held as arranged and prominent officials and politicians attended the "services". "Steve" himself delivered the "Funeral oration."

"O, O this—" he said "take charge of this magnet that, for a brief space inhabited our sphere of life—mother Earth. This man's premature demise was brought on by himself because of his constant refusals to hear or heed his master's voice.

"Great is our grief—he was a good man—but—. But he became puffed up and vain. Necessity demanded his death. It is the old law of the survival of the fittest.

"Just as we must kill our prize dog if he goes mad, so must we kill out the disloyal from our organization. Now, let's all have a drink while John is lowered into political oblivion."

The party that followed rivals description. Indeed, had Nero or any of the debauched Roman Emperors returned to earth and witnessed that revel they must certainly would have had to blush for shame and vexation. Practically everyone was busy imbibing with, and as the evening progressed, the "party" degenerated into a mere drunken orgy.

Low girls and young married women clothed all but undressed their dresses torn from them, ripped into rags and tatters amid wild shrieks of glee and maudlin attempts at song. The house rang with drunken shouts, abandoned laughter and wild oaths.

'BUNNY' STINGY DECLARES 'PEACHES'

By "PEACHES" BROWNING

New York, Oct. 15.—I suppose there are any number of foolish girls aching for the opportunity to replace me in Mr. Browning's affections.

I can imagine their thoughts, their dreams. They see themselves showered with costly gifts, ravishing gowns, enticing lingerie, a big Rolls Royce with a uniformed chauffeur at their command, pearl necklaces around their necks and all the money they want to spend!

I can't blame them for thinking so when I recall all the hideous publicity attending my marriage to Mr. Browning. Publicity! Daddy throws on it. He did nothing without first stopping to consider its publicity possibilities. Our whole affair was a nightmare of newspaper notoriety.

GENEROSITY A "MYTH."

Mr. Browning has told the newspapers that he spent between $500 and $600 a day on me, about $20,000 in all.

It's about time this myth of Daddy Browning's "generosity" was exploded. It didn't take long for him to show his true nature after we were married.

Why, on our very honey moon he showed how stingy he really is. That honeymoon! You remember he went to Cold Springs and how the newspapers wove fanciful tales of his prodigality, the sumptuousness of the mansion to which he was taking me, the splendor of our surroundings! Why, it was enough to turn any one's head.

GENEROUS, EXCEPT IN MONEY

Let me tell you the truth. That royal palace turned out to be just an ordinary shack and to maintain it properly big hearted Daddy Browning gave my mother the huge sum of $30 a week and all she was required to do with that big bunch of money was to buy the food for six persons, pay the rent, $75 a month, the electricity and gas bills, and so on! Of course she couldn't make ends meet and had to pay for many things out of her own pocket.

Mr. Browning was a generous husband in everything except where it involved money and the ordinary luxuries of life. He kept telling me of the style we were going to put on, nothing was going to be too good for his "Peaches." And to prove he was a man of his word, he brought me to a little, dinky furnished apartment in Kew Gardens and with a magnificent gesture of his hand, purred: "This is all yours, 'Peaches.'"

My husband wanted me to dress in keeping with his financial standing. He didn't care what I spent on a dress so long as it didn't exceed $25.

AS TO SHOWY GARMENTS.

Those dresses! Honestly, sometimes I forget my misery when I remember those wild stories of my wardrobe. Fifty-five frocks and gowns! Let me tell you all my dresses put end to end wouldn't circle a barrel. Actually altogether I have 20 dresses—and such dresses! How he haggled and pleaded and dickered with the sales people! When he finally was allowed a dollar reduction he was the happiest man in the place.

But what I was going to tell you about those dresses was this—Daddy wanted them to look like real money. They had to have color and plenty of trimming. I've been condemned for the showy garments I wore. I couldn't help it. They were the kind he wanted me to wear.

Mr. Browning gave me so allowance of $30 a week and out of it I had to buy hats, shoes and underwear and pay all my personal expenses. And the doctors! Gee, it was terribly humiliating for me to stand by and watch him haggle with them over their fees the few times he did give me medical attention. He wouldn't let them go near me unless they told him beforehand just what they were going to charge and if it was more than $5 that doctor was out of luck.

Woman Letter Writers Call 'Peaches' Ungrateful

New York, Oct. 16.—Women and girls who once thrilled over "Peaches" Heenan Browning's May-December romance, have turned against her and her mother and now have sympathy only for "poor Daddy Browning."

This is shown in the second installment of letters, received by Edward W. Browning, the "Cinderella Man," since his girl bride left him.

From Brooklyn comes a letter signed "Just a Little Dreamer," which, Browning says, is typical of the scores he has received. The letter follows:

"Dear Mr. Browning: Won't you accept my sympathy. From what I have read in the papers you have been very good to Peaches.

"A honeymoon is a wonderful thing, but Peaches has yet to learn that a husband such as you have been to her comes first and always, no matter how good her mother may have been to her.

"I do not envy Peaches because that would be wrong, but I am sorry she has been such a foolish girl.

"Oh, how I would love and appreciate a Daddy like you.

"P. S. Perhaps she will realize her mistake and come back to you. I hope so for your sake. With all your money you are now just a 'poor Duddy Browning.'"

Another letter from Brooklyn, signed "Your Devoted Friend," tells Browning that "she (Peaches) is not worthy of your love."

A mother of a nineteen-year-old girl, living in Corona, L. I., writes Browning asking him to present her daughter to "some nice one." The letter, signed "Friend," says:

"My daughter is nineteen years and of course would like to make friends, but with the boys and girls nowadays it is hard to find a respectable friend. Mr. Browning, you are very much acquainted with clubs. Some nice clubs, I mean. I would be very glad to have my daughter belong. I would love to have her acquainted. So if it isn't too much trouble for you, Mr. Browning, you may call us up."

JAIL AND $110 FINES IN FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

A two-months' sentence in the House of Correction and fines amounting to $110 were meted out by Judge John J. Brown in East Boston court this morning to Pet. Sabatino, 34, of Frankfort street, the operator of the automobile which police say killed Mrs. Sarah Boudreau, 60, of No. 954½ Sumner street, on September 21.

Sabatino was fined $100 on the charge of driving so as to endanger the lives of the public and $10 for operating without a license, and appealed the two-months' sentence.

VOLSTEAD ADMITS HIS LAW IS ONE GRAND SUCCESS

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 16—(A.P.)—The prohibition law is wiping out slowly but surely the liquor traffic of the United States, according to Andrew J. Volstead, sponsor of the dry enforcement act.

Volstead, who is legal adviser of the Northwest Prohibition Administration, told the Minnesota Anti-Saloon League the unlawful liquor business was becoming unprofitable and soon will have to be abandoned because of the various agencies already at work against bootlegging.

"The wets," he said, "have organized against prohibition the dry forces have the advantage of the actual saloon condition which formerly was a strong factor in fostering sentiment favorable to the dry[s]

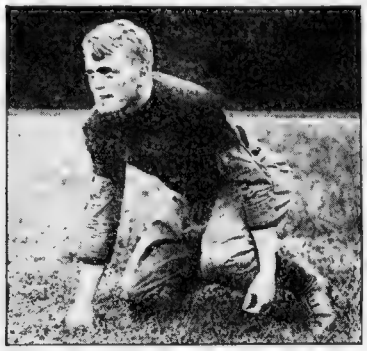
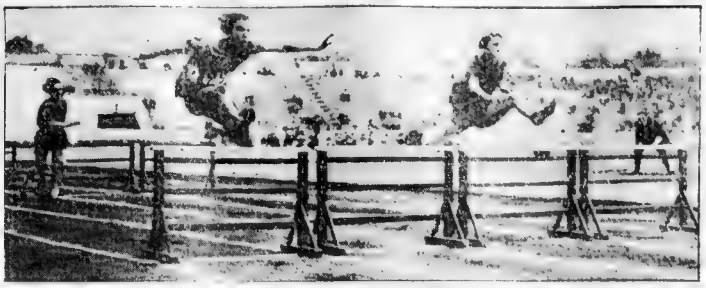
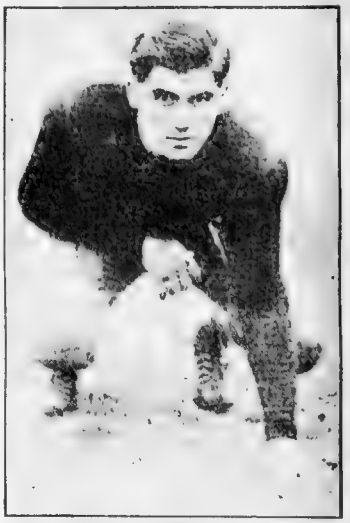
Grid Stars Strain Every Muscle for Big Contests



HARVARD HALFBACK. Eben Clark, one of Arnold Horween's backfield prospects, who will see much action before the season closes. Clark is also a hockey player of merit. He gets his big chance today when he starts against William and Mary.



FEMALE FLIERS. This picture shows the finish of the 100-yard hurdle race in the Pershing Stadium at Colombes, near Paris. Mlle. Davisseau, a speedy French miss, may be seen winning the event. French girls go in strong for track athletics, both for the shorter and longer races. They have become exceptionally proficient.

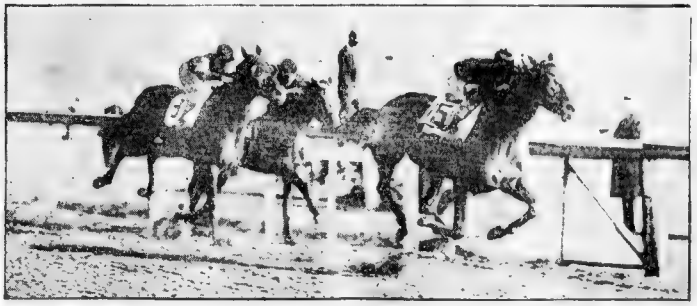


CAPTAIN COOK OF CAMBRIDGE. This husky tackle leads the Cambridge Latin School eleven this year and is putting up a sturdy game in the line. He will be among those mentioned for their work.

CONTACT! Columbia University's gridiron warriors indulge in a little strenuous exercise. Photo shows George Carnell, a promising candidate for halfback position, being roughly spilled by Glen T. Kuehl and E. E. Jassie during tackling practice. Coach Crowley's charges collide with the strong Ohio State football team at Baker Field today, and hope to show up well against the team which boasts of Andy Oberlander among its coaches. The Lions are on the short end of the betting, however.

TIGER! TIGER! Dick Baldwin, Princeton guard, who starts against the Navy today. He is a veteran from last year's fine eleven.

CENTER PIVOT. Harvey, stalwart gridman, who will play center for Yale against Dartmouth today. Harvey beat out Phillips for the job in a hard fight.



SOME NAME! Sweet Money is the monicker attached to this horse, and it turned out to be most appropriate. For Sweet Money collected the sweet money in this race at Jamaica. Hanky Rice was second and New Hope third.

NASSAU LINEMAN. T. J. Rosengarten, son of a former Princeton star, who will play against the Annapolis team at tackle today. He won a letter last year and is battling Darby and Meislahn for the berth this season.

FIELD GENERAL of Tad Jones' Yale football team. Phil Bunnell assumes the role, not only of quarterback, but of captain as well. He is the Elis' best back.

BULL OF THE BULLDOGS. George "Bull" Lowe, captain of the Boston pro football team, and still, after many years' service, one of the hardest hitting ends in the game. He was wounded in France.

THE NAVY'S THREAT. Allan Shapley, flashy Naval Academy halfback, who has been the chief Middie threat during his gridiron career. Princeton will find out again how good this sailor is today.

Gene Tunney Gives Friends Credit for Early Success in Climb to Crest

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

This is the eleventh chapter of Gene Tunney's own story—written by himself—of his life and fighting career, written exclusively for the Boston Evening American.

By GENE TUNNEY
World's Heavyweight Champion

Gene Tunney

MOST of the men who were early in forecasting my rise to the heavyweight championship have traveled right along with me. It was almost instinctive with me to choose my friends, my books and my relaxations with scrupulous care. Once selected, I made it a point to try to keep my friendship in repair.

Among the many men who have been my mentors, there are three who contributed no little to the moulding of my character. They are William McCabe, Danny Dunn and James Bronson. Bill and Danny were athletic directors of the Knights of Columbus during the war and saw me in some of my numerous interbattalion contests.

After I had won the light heavyweight championship of the A. E. F., Dan said to me:

Make the heavyweight championship of the world your goal. You are going to become a great fighter. Live a decent life. Associate with decent people. Be fixed in your purpose and some day you will please me mightily by defeating the champion.

McCabe was in his corner the night I defeated Dempsey. So also was Jimmy Bronson, one of the smartest of men and one of the shrewdest of fistic advisers. Jimmy was in charge of all the boxing in the army. I received 100 francs for a bout arranged by Jimmy, that against Bob Pierce at the Cirque de Paris. It was during the bouts at the Cirque that I first learned how to condition myself.

O'Dowd Objects to Tunney's Retort

Here's a story that always struck me funny:

When games were arranged for the Pershing Stadium in Paris the pride of the Expeditionary Forces's athletes were billed to compete. I was selected as a contestant in the light heavyweight tourney and was sent to Lanzre to train.

Sergeant Mike O'Dowd, then middleweight champion of the world, was scheduled as my conditioner. I know next to nothing about training, aside from being careful with my diet. I was green and had many boxing faults. Consequently, I was greatly pleased when I learned that the middleweight champion was to be supervisor.

Mike and I didn't get along any too well. For some reason, Mike took an early and marked dislike to me. He paid me scant attention. The complete severance of our relations, however, occurred one day when he asked me a question and I replied:

"Absolutely."

Mike seemed amazed. He shouted at me:

"What was that you said?"

"I said 'absolutely'", I repeated.

That was too much for Mike. Addressing no one in particular but the whole A. E. F. in general, Mike gave a despairing gesture and piped:

"Oh, what the——! I give up! I'm through! This guy will never make a fighter. How could he? He says 'absolutely'! Imagine a fighter saying 'absolutely!'"

Shortly before the Dempsey fight, Jimmy Bronson brought to my Stroudsburg camp a few clippings of the movies of a bout I had with Ted Jamieson of Milwaukee, and in which bout I won the 175-pound championship of the A. E. F. In the proper place, I shall try to tell of the help I had from Bronson all through my training siege for the championship fight against Dempsey and how he continually heightened my faith in myself.

School of Hard Knocks Is Winner

Jimmy, among other loyal friends, was one of my best boosters in 1919, when I trudged the street looking for employment—just an exsoldier with pockets as empty as my stomach.

Through that October and that bitterly raining, snowy, cold November, I sought resolutely for work and finally decided that there wasn't a job in New York city. And all that time it never occurred to me that I might, through boxing, capitalize the rather slender fame of having become champion of the A. E. F. Since then, you may be sure, I have become accustomed to seeing fame turned into money.

Now that fame and fortune are about to smile on me, I must confess that I am glad I went through the University of Hard Knocks.

I believe that a heavyweight champion, if he is at all observing of the events of the day, has a marvelous opportunity for a liberal education. Of course everyone can't be a champion in the ring, and many persons might not want to be a boxing champion, but I do believe that here in this remarkable country each man has an opportunity to be a champion at something which may make for the happiness of our fellow men.

Try not to be knocked down, no matter what your game, but if you are toppled over, smile, get up and come back for more. That's my idea of real manhood in action.

(In Monday's article Tunney tells how he toughened his brittle hands.)

MARE CAPTURES DISTANCE TEST FOR CAVALRY

Brandon, Vt., Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Miss Brandon, a three-quarter bred bay mare, entered by the service team of the 3d U. S. Cavalry and ridden by Corporal S. J. Mathewson of the outfit, was awarded first place in the eighth annual long distance ride. Six of the 14 starters finished.

The others in the order placed on condition, since all completed the 200 mile ride on time, were Stockings, 3d U. S. Cavalry, ridden by Sergt. Stanley Blazejewski; Red Hawk, entered and ridden by Lt. T. M. McCready of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Peggy A, Troop F, 3d Cavalry, ridden by Sergt. Gustickesy, Bunny Boy 3rd U. S. Cavalry, ridden by Corporal Nickerson, and Lillian Russell, entered and ridden by Capt. J. A. Weeks.

In capturing first place in the first endurance ride in which she has been entered, Miss Brandon won a leg on the service cup for three years' competition. Peggy A, which finished fourth this year, had two legs on the trophy by virtue of her wins the two last years. A fall by Peggy two days ago was thought to have gone heavily against her in the judging of condition.

Besides the interlocutory possession of the cup, Miss Brandon won the first prize of $600. The money prize was $100 less for each lower place progressively, ending with the sixth and last winner at $100. Miss Brandon's rider, Corporal Mathewson, who also rode Corporal Matheson, won the $100 prize offered for the best horsemanship displayed and another $200 prize for the rider bringing his mount in in the best condition. The Brandon Chamber of Commerce gave $50 to each of the riders of the other place winners.

Announcement of the judges' verdict was made by President Paul E. Moody of Middlebury College this morning.

Miss Brandon is an eight year-old steel by Cock-of-the-Walk, an American Corporal Mathewson, fifteen years old veteran of the army horsemen entered, rode Peggy to victory two years ago and last year Lt. T. H. rd on Lolan Russell.

AL MELLO IN TRAINING IN RING COMEBACK

Al Mello of Lowell, welterweight contender who has been out of the ring for three months as a result of an operation for appendicitis, is at Jaffrey, N. H., where he will begin training for future bouts. Mello was accompanied by Bobby Gold man, his manager, and Eddie Devine, trainer, and will make the headquarters at the Shattuck Inn.

Inside Golf

The best club with which to cultivate the proper feel for iron club play is the mashie. Perhaps this is because the average player does not try to force the mashie very much. Whether the pitch is to be long or short, the mashie should be thrown into the ball with a wrist throw or forward sling of the clubhead as it goes through the ball. It is not enough to hit to the ball and then quit. Hit clear through and out from the ball, even in the shortest run-up. Timing with the irons is different and this sense of timing comes easiest with mashie practice. The blade starts forward easily, without jerk, and then it is thrown with the wrists as it gets toward the bottom arc of the forward swing.

Coach Zuppke Scores Foes of College Football Game

Urbana, Ill., Oct. 16 (A.P.).—"Football has more than a game on its hands; it has a battle against the enemies of football," Coach Robert Zuppke told 7,000 Illini rooters.

"First, it was said that football hurts players' studies and it was found the athletes received better grades than the average students. Then, it was charged that football took too much time from the student spectators' studies and that was found to be without foundation. The opponents of football are constantly picturing football as it isn't. Football has a battle on its hands against its enemies."

Rosenbloom Wins on Foul Over Flowers in 9th

By JACK CONWAY

MAXIE ROSENBLOOM of New York won on a foul in the ninth round in his bout with Tiger Flowers at the Commercial A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building. During a torrid mixup at close quarters, Maxie had planted three low punches with a left hand that went low. Rosenbloom flopped to the canvas and was declared the winner on a foul by Referee Johnny Brassil.

It had been a hard, fast fight up to the time the foul was committed with Flowers having the advantage. Maxie had entered the ring with a bully injured right duke which discounted his socking ability.

Rosenbloom was in the midst of a desperate rally when the contest was brought to its abrupt end by the New Yorker crashing three right hand wallops to the midsection of Flowers' chin in succession. This caused the Tiger to go on the war path with a vengeance. He pounded to close quarters where he whacked away with savage blows. His left suddenly got rather low and Rosenbloom dropped to the canvas in a heap. It was one of those kind of fouls which occur so quickly that even few of those close to the ring could determine whether the blow struck in a way to cause serious injury.

Jack Conway

ROSENBLOOM gave Flowers plenty of stubborn opposition and I am inclined to think that if the contest had gone the limit that the Tiger would have gained the decision, but he knew he was in a fight from the bell in the first round. Rosenbloom bobs around the ring like Dave Shade, while he is able to hit quite hard with either hand. The injury to his right hand, suffered while in training, handicapped Maxie.

In the first part of the opening round, Rosenbloom made Flowers miss a flock of punches as the champion tried to score to the head. The Tiger quickly discovered it was a difficult task to crack Rosenbloom on the chin and shifted his attack to the body. He was more successful while following out his new method of warfare. Flowers had the edge in this round.

The champion gave Maxie a shellacking in the second frame. He had Rosenbloom weary from stopping punches. Even at the bell the Tiger kept fighting on and was given a call by the referee.

ROSENBLOOM flashed brilliantly in the third session. He drove his right straight and true to the negro's chin several times.

In the fourth stanza the Tiger clowned his way out front. Rosenbloom did considerable holding which didn't help his work any.

Flowers had the fifth, sixth and seventh rounds. It looked as though he was going to coast to victory when Rosenbloom opened up in the eighth frame and soaked his illustrious opponent around the ring. Maxie continued his little walloping party in the ninth chapter and was making a fine bid for a decisive victory when the foul dropped the curtain on the show.

JOE MONTE of Brockton won over Jack Gaynon of New Bedford in the semi-final of eight rounds. Jerry Vitelli of Peabody outpointed Murray Fuchs of New York in a slashing six-rounder.

Bob Jane of Revere looked like a million dollars as he kayoed Eddie Curtis of Hyde Park in two rounds. Eddie Curley of the West End made a fine showing in his winning four-round tussle with Tommy Morrison of Scotland, while Jimmy Corcoran of Cambridge outpointed Joe Dwyer of South Boston in four chapters.

CHICAGO HOPES TO WIN OVER PENN TEAM

Philadelphia, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Pennsylvania and Chicago, intersectional football rivals for many years, were pronounced fit and ready early today for their annual tussle on Franklin Field. Play was scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock, eastern standard time.

The Maroons, coming out of the West this year unheralded as magic workers or wonder men, may be taken as deadly as the team that last year bowed to Penn 7 to 0, because their advance notices have been toned down to the minimum.

Coach Stagg, after putting his squad through a light workout yesterday, had no prediction to make as to the probable outcome of the game, but said: "We could be beaten by a larger score than last year."

Members of the team, however were not so reticent. Captain Wally Marks and the others declaring Penn was in for a beating.

"We will win this time," Marks said. "We've got the men and the stuff with which to do it."

The Maroons are known as the "Singing Gridders," because they troop on to the field singing.

Penn was prepared to meet a fast shifty eleven and an opponent that was expected to make frequent use of the forward pass. She also expected to find her deceptive offense known as the "shell game," met by a standing line, always in position to march and follow the ball. The Quakers have found their hidden ball plays effective this year because opposing linemen played low.

Duluth Boat Club Gives Up Rowing

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—The Duluth boat Club, whose crews amassed scores of records and trophies in forty years of national and international competition, has passed from existence.

Members of the club last night ratified an order recently adopted by the board of directors in charge of the club's property holdings.

As one of the last rites at the demise of Duluth rowing, a huge quorum of the club voted a floral expression of appreciation to Julius H. Barnes, grain trader of Duluth and New York, who had been commonly termed as the "father of Duluth rowing."

It was largely due to Mr. Barnes' change in residence from Duluth to New York which brought about the decline in Duluth rowing. Until the past few years Mr. Barnes gave the club large sums of money for its training coffers.

CRESCENT AND LOCUST CLUBS PLAY TOMORROW

The Crescent A. C. of Jamaica Plain will provide the opposition for the Locust A. C. of Dorchester at Locust field tomorrow afternoon. The Jamaica team is scheduled to hand the home club a stiff assignment.

The Locusts have chalked up a formidable record having been scored upon but once in four starts. Coach Johnny Dalton has drilled his team into perfection and they should romp around smoothly Sunday.

This club has one of the fastest backfields and strongest lines on the sandlots. However, Johnny Dooley a tower of strength in the Locust backfield will probably not start on account of an injury.

98,000 TO SEE TWO BIG TEN CONFLICTS

Chicago, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Two Big Ten games were outstanding among the eight conference and several intersectional clashes looming in today's announcement of Mid Western football teams.

Michigan's stadium capacity of 65,000 was sold out long before Minnesota's appearance for probably the biggest game of the day in the Middle West, and it was estimated that the Illinois home coming crowd at the Illini's battle with Iowa would count 50,000.

Also meeting in the first games of the fall with a bearing on the western conference championship were Indiana and Northwestern at Evanston and Wisconsin and Purdue on Purdue's field. Michigan was given a slight edge in the race at Ann Arbor Northwestern was conceded the better chance and the Illinois-Iowa and Purdue-Wisconsin games were called a toss-up.

The other two Big Ten teams were on the eastern seaboard, Chicago at Pennsylvania and Ohio State at Columbia.

Big Crowd Sees Dartmouth Eleven Take on Yale in Old Eli Bowl

on his way from Hanover to attend this game.

Shortly before 2 o'clock Captain Hooker Horton led his Dartmouth squad of 33 players into the Bowl for their prelim practice. After limbering up their legs for a few minutes Eddie Dooley, the veteran quarterback; Dick Black and Bob Harris did some kicking. Dooley got away some fine kicks. Black showed up better with his boots, getting a little more distance and more elevation to his punts.

Yale sprang a last-minute surprise by announcing that John Ordway, the Winchester boy, would be in at fullback in place of Foote. Ordway has been in school difficulties and was just taken off probation this morning. Ordway starred on the freshmen team two years ago. He was captain of the freshmen team and gave promise of being one of the greatest backs Yale has had in years. As he was on probation all last year, and, in fact, up until 11 o'clock this morning, this will be his first varsity game.

Fifteen minutes before the start of the game the Yale side of the field was well filled, and there was approximately 40,000 people present.

While the Dartmouth and Yale bands were staging their battle of wits Captain Bunnell raced on the field followed by his first varsity when sent through light signal practice after which Noble, Foote and Ordway did some fine kicking, especially Noble who got away two kicks with the wind which carried 60 yards. After the practice Yale remained on the field but Dartmouth retired to the dressing room under the stands.

The Dartmouth backs and ends were decked out in white head gears indicating that Dartmouth plans to use an overhead game extensively.

First Period

Dartmouth won the toss and elected to kick to Yale with the wind at their backs. Hardy kicked off for Dartmouth to Fishwick. The ball was brought back as Dartmouth halted, not announced their readiness to start. Then again the ball was brought back as the ball went outside on the second kick on the 20-yard line.

Dartmouth protested the ball and another one was brought in and the game finally got under way. Hardy kicked to Scott, who ran back 20 yards to the 40-yard line, and Foote, who started in place of Ordway, made six yards, and after the next play Foote fumbled and Cole recovered for Dartmouth.

Fishwick broke through and threw McPhail for a five-yard loss. The ball was on Dartmouth's 45-yard line. After McPhail had failed to gain Dooley faked a kick and in a mixup Horton got into Yale's backyards. Dooley punted to Bunnell and Foote and Bunnell got mixed up on the ball, Bunnell recovered on Yale's 14-yard line.

Noble gained 9 yards and then Bunnell made it first down going through the line to Yale's 32-yard line. Hardy threw Noble for no gain. Noble kicked to Dooley who after being hit by Fishwick, broke away and ran to Dartmouth's 42-yard line. Horton crashed through Sturbahn for 4 yards. After Line had lost 2 yards, Dooley punted to Bunnell on Yale's 13-yard line.

Yale was unable to gain and Noble punted outside on Yale's 43-yard line. MacPhail got four yards through Quarter. A short pass, Dooley to Lane, gained four yards. Dartmouth was penalized five yards and then a double pass, followed by a long pass, was intercepted by Bunnell on Yale's 20-yard line Noble zigzagged his way to Yale's 39-yard line, where Lane brought him down.

Bunnell hurt but resumed play. Noble kicked to Dooley who was run outside on his 34 yard line. In the rushes Horton and MacPhail made first down. Ball on Dartmouth's 44 yard line. After a pass failed Dooley punted to Bunnell who got the ball on the goal line and ran it back to Dartmouth's 34-yard line.

Four line plunges by Noble and Kline brought the ball to Dartmouth's 24-yard line. Noble drove the ball of the work. First quarter Dartmouth 0, Yale 0.

SECOND PERIOD.

Dooley broke up a pass, Noble to Scott. Then Kline dropped a perfect pass from Noble with a touchdown in front of him. It was Dartmouth's ball on their 20 yard line. Dartmouth was forced to kick when MacPhail's fumble cost her 3 yards. Dooley punted to Bunnell, who was downed in the center of the field by Phillips.

After Phillips broke through and dropped Kline, Noble was hurt. Yale got another break when Hardy was offside. Ball on Dartmouth's 38-yard line and Yale's first down. Noble broke through for another first down to Dartmouth's 20-yard line.

Foote fumbled on the next play and Cole recovered for Dartmouth. Dartmouth's ball on a pass from Lane. MacPhail raced around Fishwick to Dartmouth's 40-yard line. Lane followed with a nine-yard gain around end, but Dartmouth was held almost to the centre of the field

A smash at the centre by Norton brought the ball into Yale's territory against gave Dartmouth first down. A double pass, MacPhail to Lane, went around Scott to Yale's 22-yard line. The reverse of this play, Lane to MacPhail, went to Yale's 17 yard line. Cox replaced Kline for Yale. Another double pass, MacPhail to Lane, brought Dartmouth to Yale's 6-yard line and first down. Black replaced Norton for Dartmouth. Black gained 2 yards.

After MacPhail had failed to gain Black went over for a touchdown. Dartmouth 6, Yale 0. Dooley kicked the goal for the point. Dartmouth 7, Yale 0.

Phillips kicked off to Fishwick, who brought the ball to Yale's 30-yard line. Noble kicked to Dooley, who was run outside on Dartmouth's 40-yard line. Ordway went in for Noble. After a short gain by Lane, Black made first down on two rushes putting the ball on Dartmouth's 40-yard line.

Dooley kicked to Bunnell, who was dropped on Yale's 2-yard line by Phillips. Holleran at right tackle for Dartmouth. A forward pass from Ordway to Bunnell went to the ball to mid field. McAvoy replaced Lane. Ordway fumbled and was thrown for a loss of 7 yards by Cole. Ordway punted across the goal line Ball on 20-yard line. First down for Dartmouth. MacPhail fumbled, but recovered, losing 7 yards.

BIG SHIFT IN LINEUP OF PILOTS

At Least Half of Big League Teams Expected to Have New Managers in 1927

This is the unless season of the year for baseball managers, and the boys who run ball clubs have had a more worried look than the present one. A close examination of the setting on various heads will show. We may note some graying here and a lot of caps pushed back to relieve

Lee Fohl of the Red Sox is going away from here and Dan Howley is the leading candidate for his job. Rumor has it that Dr. Smith will be dropped by the Detroit Tigers, where he has been a manager, and that George Moriarty, the present boss, will take his place.

George Sisler has been given the axe by the St. Louis Browns, and Will Killifer, right-hand man of Connie Mack, is due for a change, which may mean a shift in Art Fletcher, if he out of the Polo Grounds before long. Hank and Stuffy McInnis have been named for the spot.

The wolves are howling about Tris Speaker out in Cleveland, and it is said that the great Texan may draw out unless he is willing to take a big cut in salary. And the same may be true of Hugh Cobb of the Detroit Tigers.

Looks like long, cruel Winter for some of the managers.

Semi-Pro Clash for Grid Title

One of the best semi-professional football games of the season takes place at Fenway Park today, when the St. Alphonsus A. A. of Roxbury meets the Fitton A. A. of East Boston in the first game of the round-robin series for the championship of Boston.

Both teams are putting their greatest strength on the field. All the injured members have been given a chance to recover and are in condition. Furthermore, the week has been one of consistent hard practice for both squads. Coach Cleary of the "Saints" and Coach Fred O'Brien of the Fittons have been putting in long sessions for the game. Summary:

MASON & Hamlin Concert Grand piano, ebony case, suitable for studio or hall; excellent condition; reasonable. Newton 2o. 2843-W.

The quickest and most profitable way to sell musical instruments is to advertise in the American and Advertiser Classified Pages.

Mrs. J. E. Nordury, 36 Oakley Road, Watertown, wished to sell a Mason & Hamlin Concert Grand Piano last week. She called an American and Advertiser Classified Ad Taker and had an ad inserted for one week.

Many prospective buyers answered the ad and the piano was sold at Mrs. Nordury's price.

West Point, Oct. 16.—While the eyes of the Big Three may rest on Yale in mid and Yale today, and the eyes of the West lean heavily toward Pennsylvania and Chicago, the eyes of old Uncle Sam's soldier boys across the miles from a score of outposts toward this historic old point.

For the Army in meeting Syracuse, is undergoing its baptism of fire today, the baptism that will make or break it as a contender for national honors. Not since Eldredge, Farwick and Garbisch has West Point had such a football team as "Biff" Jones drives this year and never in decade have their hopes for success run so high.

Coach Arthur Ball will use the same line-up as last week with Cullen, Murphy, Hosie, Donnelly, Garland and Prendergast alternating in the backfield. The linemen are J. Daley, P. and H. Dowd, Holbrow, Flaherty, Doherty and Case. The game will start at 3:15 o'clock.

Opposed to these four will be Barbuti, Carr and Goldman of Syracuse, three fast men, who have done great deeds this season among the longest early openers. Barbuti and Carr are sprinters and Goldman is looked upon as a comer in the cinder path champion as was Joseph Berry, one of the 1 ads. Two hundred pounds is a big rush at any college in the army is all around skill.

Syracuse may be regarded as a bit more powerful than the seven Hanson is one of the best fullback in the country and he will have assisting him Freeman, the brilliant Orange center, and five other huskies who have on a par with the country's best.

The army has a great end in Berry, a big fellow with tremendous power and a fine drive.

MEDFORD TAKES ON LAWRENCE HIGH TEAM

By EDDIE DONDERO

The Medford High football team drives to the banks of the Merrimac River for their annual battle with Lawrence High today in the Mill Towners' stadium.

It will not be the Medford combination that has blanked Winchester, Somerville, Boston and Stoneham during the early season. Part from the Beckmen, with a crippled roster have little hope of protecting their Interstate title.

Eddie Dondero

Early today Coach Beck announced that Guido Del Grande, brilliant end, would not be permitted to play owing to an attack of the grippe. "Wat" Connolly, fairly sickly, carrying his 200 pounds, is also seriously ill.

George Russell, big tackle, who put the shackles on 190 pounds, is parading around with a cane. His left ankle has been wrenched.

The fourth hospital list victim is Robert Elliott, wing man, who has an injured shoulder.

The Medfordites' defense is not what it could be. Capt. George Cronin, Al Lo Monte tackle, has proven Welsh to take care of the left side of the line.

Edward Hern, the defensive halfback, will be forced to leave his position often on the weak side to prevent the Mark Twain tribe from gaining any yardage.

Medford's offensive strength already has been proven on the large scores amassed. Lionel Wells, Herb. Ingraham, Mo. and Durant are each good halfbacks.

Another hunter's luncheon on the Cambridge Hills Friday night and Waltham game at the Watch City, Boston College High School goes to form in a game that will be a hard scramble.

ATHLETICS BUY JOE BOLEY

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (A.P.)—Joe Boley, star shortstop of the Baltimore International League club, realized a seven-year major league dream today when Manager Jack Dunn formally announced his sale to the Philadelphia American League club for cash and players.

The amount of cash the Athletics will part with for the services of "Colonel Joe" for whom Dunn once refused $100,000, was not revealed, nor have the players set been named. Boley is a seven straight pennants with Boley at short. He reports to Connie Mack in the Spring.

DEER SEASON OPENS IN MAINE; GAME PLENTIFUL

Bangor, Me., Oct. 16 (A.P.)—Daylight today ushered in the deer season in Eastern and Northern Maine, and from now until the sun sets on the last day of November hunters may kill one deer each in the eight counties in which the open season is in effect. Deer are reported unusually plentiful in all sections and early season hunting conditions are excellent. Bears are reported more numerous than for years, but partridge is not plentiful.

FLATLEY SAYS

Pros Work Hard, but Get Plenty
Boston Glad Banny Is Back
Pyle Overlooking Opportunity

GEORGE WILSON, called the Wildcat because he always comes up to scratch, as you might say, announces that professional football is a tougher game than the college brand. The dollar chasers have to practice every day, get in two or three games a week, and chase all over the map, according to George, who is a better player than Red Grange.

There's quite a difference when Saturday night comes along, though. The students get a hot shower and a lot of abuse from the coaches, and call it a week. The pros get large, fat envelopes, even though the players are broke, and all the training they have to think about is getting the right one out of town.

George and the rest of the boys are getting while the getting is good, as they don't think a little of the Boston fans. Nick Flatley of Jack. The latter used to do a little football with a little cash, so they really don't know how lucky they are.

Nick Flatley

HE sends his son to college,
In football to engage,
So that the kid can later on support him in old age.

BOSTON baseball fans are very good to know that Davey Harkcroft will manage the Braves in 1927. David has carved out quite a large piece of himself in Boston esteem. He hasn't been a howling success in three shirts, but the populace hereabouts knows that good teams are not built in a hurry.

Our Braves have shown flashes of real diamond genius, and Davey has always been the brilliant leader in the wild rushes. He has the professional force to carry his battered forces hilariously into high spots. He likes to knock off fast cars, and the gang catches the fun.

Danny is getting smarter each season and the club is getting better material for him to work on. One of these not far off years baseball sunshine will burn on those parts again.

DORA DUMB says that she's just frantic about Suzanne, but hasn't been able to buy any tennis matches anywhere in Boston.

SEEMS to us that C. C. Pyle, collecting plenty with his tennis tourists, has forgotten all about his pro football, and is likely to get hit quite severely before the season is up the nuts on our nervous highways.

C. C. has the ability and the energy to put over the ballyhoo that means success. He has been so busy getting Suzanne on the front pages, that he has forgotten his gridders. Which is a mistake.

The tennis pros can't be one tour of the cities, and then their glamor will be gone. They may come back for more, but they'll never get it. Pro football, on the other hand, can be built up into a permanent cash register, with proper and efficient direction. Pyle could give it that if he wasn't chasing some softer dough. He's getting so much in a hurry now that he should worry about the future.

THE crippled rubber alpenstock should be awarded somewhere in this direction. Not a wise crack in a whole week about William and Mary.

A COLLEGE education is a necessity now to fit young men to earn enough to buy tickets for the big football games. A series of the ducats keeps going up, and the proletariat eventually may get in on some of the large row.

If tickets get high enough the butter and egg men may fill the cheering sections. There would be a new kick for the positions of thrills. Imagine their yell rising on the Autumn winds: "Bring another quart, waiter, and make it snappy."

They wouldn't know a thing about football, so they would feel perfectly at home. And how they would endow the colleges that had the best looking girls collected for the Saturday collisions.

BROWN TO LEAD GIANTS ATTACK ON BOSTON

By BILL McAULEY

Davey Brown, the American born youngster who is leading the goal scorers in the American Soccer League by a comfortable margin, will be the main cog in the attack of the New York Giants when that team takes the field at Walpole street today against the Boston pros.

Supporting Davey will be four of the Hakoah stars Guttman, Schwartz, Gruenwald and Heuesler. The Giants got away to a poor start but now are much in the race through the brilliant performance accomplished during the past week-end when they won three games, two from Philadelphia and one from Brooklyn.

Hughie McGhee the peppery manager of the Giants is predicting that his club will score its first victory in the city today over the Blue and Gold but the Giants will find this is not an easy task for the Hub eleven, as also has struck a winning gait.

The Woodside's will be minus Dave Priestly and Jock McArthur, two of their best backfield men, but with the return of Johnny Young and the addition of Matt Short should prove just as strong in the defense.

The attacking line is McNab, Nilsen, Blair, Ballantyne and Fleming and is in good shape. Billy Andrews of Everett will have charge of the game with Tom Freeman and Pete Corrigan of this city acting as linesmen. The kick off takes place at 3 o'clock.

Keep the Ring Fakers Out!

Fred Fulton, barred in California and in most other States, after his fake contest with Tony Fuente, has been advertised to box Joe Monte in this city on October 25.

When an attempt was made to bring Fuente, Fulton's little partner, here, the Massachusetts Boxing Commission put the ban on the Mexican. It will undoubtedly hand out similar treatment to Mr. Horizontal Fulton.

The lanky plasterer recently applied for a license to box in New York and was turned down on the ground he was a convicted faker. The boys along the Roaring Forties have a tip that if Fulton is allowed to get started in some sucker State that the boxing fathers in Gotham will lift the ban on him. The gentlemen who have charge of Fulton's affairs will find that Massachusetts is not a sucker State. They will discover very quickly that the game has been kept cleaner here than in any other place in this country and that Messrs. Buckley, Lane and Foote do not intend to allow fakers to jeopardize the future of a great sport.—JACK CONWAY.

Chapman Lucky to Get Draw With College Boy

Red Chapman, Chelsea featherweight, was fortunate in getting a draw with Eddie Mack, a college student, in a four-round bout at Denver, according to an Associated Press news item.

Charlie Cardio, Chapman's manager, comes to bat with a red hot wire in which he attacks the decision and claims it caused a rift. Here are the twos tories:

Denver, Col., Oct. 16 (A.P.)—"Red" Chapman, claimant to the world's featherweight championship, and Eddie Mack, Iowa College student, went four rounds to a draw here. The young collegian more than held his own in the first three rounds, but Chapman's whirlwind finish overcame Mack's early advantage.

By CHARLEY CARDIO,
(Manager of Red Chapman)

Denver, Col., Oct. 16.—Red Chapman will but knocked out Eddie Mack of Denver here in a slashing four-round fight. Chapman scored a knockdown in the third round and in the fourth round Mack held on for dear life, the referee refusing to break them, Mack being on the floor. Chapman could not shake him off. To the surprise of everybody, the fighter was called a draw. After the hard decision the fans broke chairs and windows and threatened the referee.

RINDGE TECH HARRIERS MAKE PERFECT SCORE

Danvers, Oct. 16.—Rindge Technical School cross-country team rolled up a perfect score in defeating the St. John's Prep team, winning 15 to 50. The order of finish was: Whalley, Rindge; Amalone, Rindge; MacDonald, Rindge; Hamilton, Rindge; Cook, Rindge; Graves, Rindge; Burke, St. John's; Anderson, Rindge; Keefe, St. John's; Connors, Rindge; Pearl, Rindge; Kenny, St. John's; Mullins, St. John's; Kessler, Rindge; Razo, Rindge; Carver, Rindge; Melcher, Rindge; Higgins, Rindge; Quinn, St. John's. The time was 19m 32 4-5s.

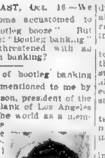
America Is Threatened by Wave of Bootleg Banking

By B. C. FORBES

PACIFIC COAST, Oct. 16—We have become accustomed to the phrase "bootleg booze." But here's a new one: "Bootleg banking."

Is America threatened with an epidemic of such banking?

THE danger of bootleg banking was first mentioned to me by Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles and known to the world as a member of the Dawes Commission. The question overshadowing all others among bankers today is: "Shall the Federal government sanction branch banking by national banks?"



B. C. Forbes

The battle over this question promises to wreck the convention of the American Bankers' Association at Los Angeles. Plainly, this compromise was reached.

National banks should be allowed to establish branches inside their own city limits in those States which permit branches of State banks but should not be allowed to have branches outside their home city even though State banks may have them.

If it be considered good business to permit state banks to open branches anywhere within their State why in the name of common sense should it be considered bad business to permit National banks to do the same?

The very foundation and citadel of America's banking system are our National banks.

Everything possible should be done to strengthen, not to weaken, our National banks. To forbid them to do what State banks are permitted to do would be to handicap them gratuitously.

Congress should be the last body in the world to take action tending to weaken the very foundation of the nation's banking system. Its duty is clear. It should extend to all National banks exactly the same rights in the matter of branch banking as are accorded to State Banks.

If branch banking be a menace to small independent banks then let the various States take whatever steps are deemed advisable. National banks ask no privileges not granted their sister State-chartered institutions.

Mr Robinson put the whole matter in a nutshell when he said to me "We will have either bank ing or bootleg banking"

He explained thus: "If any banking organization desires to expand, the use of holding companies will permit the acquiring of banks with out any restrictions whatever."

The net of it all is that branch banking, whether we like it or dislike it, is coming as surely as chain stores have come. Those who wish to stay or delay the coming of the day should get their State Legislature to act. Congress will abide by whatever action the States take.

Only, if the law lags too far behind economics, bootleg banking doubtless will develop.

If you were to ask my opinion, I would say that some of it was developed already.

Apart from the branch banking fight the bankers' convention was notable, mainly for the generous hospitality extended to the 10,000 delegates and visitors. In the early days of California the arrival of a stranger from across the Rockies was something of an event and open doors and open hearts greeted him. Californians have to this day retained something of this same spirit of cordiality.

Several of the addresses were notable, one by Rudolph E. Oged of San Francisco attracting unusual attention. It dealth with the underlying causes of the unexampled era of America's prosperity, with our success in preserving freedom and equality, and stressed the need for vigilance in fighting attempts to standardize" our life and conduct.

PEARSON LIKES BUILDING OF RAILROADS

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

Many people have ambitions. More ought to have good one- often happens that those we ambitions have a yearning for something which is distinct from their life's profession. Not a few of our Presidents, Edward J. Pearson of the revived New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Edward J. Pearson

President Pearson tells me he would like to build a transcontinental railroad. "While I doubt if another transcontinental railway will ever be built," he states, "if one should be, I should certainly want the job and, if you should go along with me I feel sure you would like it too.

While some of the Canadian railroads go from Atlantic to Pacific, there is no railroad in the United States that can be strictly called a transcontinental. I suppose the name was originally applied to the big lines because they ran more than half the distance across the continent.

"Probably most people have forgotten the early experience and training of Edward J. Pearson, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad," says a Wall Street writer. "If so, then his opinion on the prospects of the Northwest territory is not fully appreciated. He spent 28 years between the Pacific coast and the Mississippi river in the Northwest, mostly in the capacity of an engineer on the Northern Pacific and St. Paul roads. As chief engineer in charge if the Puget Sound extension west of Butte, Montana, he was in position to know whether there were wasteful expenditures in connection with that project. In a rather voluminous manuscript which he read at the St. Paul meeting in New York recently, Mr. Pearson, as a witness for the Interstate Commerce Commission recently showed that the cost of the Puget Sound lines was comparable with usual costs for such constructing at that time and that there were no waste ful or extravagant outlays.

"It happened that the question- naire sent to him by the committee he reached him while on a trip in the Northwest, the first time he had been in there in 15 years. Thus he no doubt was more observing on the trip than he otherwise would have been, and the fact that he had been detached from the territory so long perhaps gave him a better perspective for judgment than if he had been continually in touch with the region. His conclusions on the prospects of the Puget Sound territory are important. Apparently the valley of traffic depression has struck bottom, and territory there should be gradual but constant improvement. Viewing all the factors I predict a gradual increase in traffic both freight and passenger eventuating into much larger volume."

Return of Governor Fuller and family from Little Boar's Head in Rye Beach, N. H., reminds me that there is a fair-sized "Fuller colony" at the beach these seasons. Three of the mansion-like Summer cottages there, all in a row, are occupied by Fullers, and I was told at Rye on Columbus Day that the Governor had been seeking to add to his holdings. A lot of tourists, on seeing the Governor's Summer home, and where they can get a glimpse of the Governor's imported cattle. These, however, are on a farm in another section.

The Fullers are not the only Sum- mer visitors who have a colony of their own. The Shoulder family, of automobile fame, also have turned big Summer residences at Rye.

In the Little Boar's Head section can be seen by the Portsmouth Union admiral, a statue to whom stands not far from the Aquarium in South Boston.

Sudden death of Frank W. Remick, who had he lived until next Sunday, would have rounded out a service of 50 years with Kidder, Peabody & Co., and who has been a partner since Oct. 2, 1903, comes as a shock to financial Boston. Mr. Remick was identified with many social service activities, gave freely of his time and energy to all of the many drives and by his courtesy and genial nature won for himself a warm spot in the affections of his business associates. Mr. Remick was born in East Boston Sept. 21, 1861. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Monday at the Unitarian church in West Newton. The banking offices of Kidder, Peabody & Co. will close at 1 o'clock on Monday for the balance of the day.

Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore

I TRUST that you will instantly recognize the modern rise of reading ugliness of the leather couch in the upper part of today's picture. Is so much massiveness, so much puffiness necessary to comfort? And is rather the only method that will give satisfaction.

One wonderful advantage of the early days is to be found in the way the wood is to sweep underneath it, or if too dust, is allowed to lurk there undisturbed, an ideal hatching place for germs.

So much good furniture has been designed before our time, and proved its worth; so much of its imperishable grace still provides inspiration for the cabinet-makers of today, that one should never condescend to purchase any but pedigreed furniture. By this I mean furniture in which some good design and craftsmanship is plainly evident.

The day had shorter posts than is now the fashion, although it does not do in the case of the different objects shown above, you will easily recognize the colonial bed, the Adam lamp and the Louis XVI. couch, though in each case the style has been adapted to modern requirements.

The SECRET STUDIO by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

A Boston Romance With a Charming Heroine

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Rosemary Merton, youngest daughter in a large Roxbury family, rebels at her poor surroundings and dreams of romance and luxury. She is attending college, but quits and gets a job in a fashionable bookstore through a friend, Nina Clark. She meets a group of artists who have a studio on the top floor which they call the Secret Studio. One Sunday Rosemary and Larry Kane, one of the artists, go to the studio alone, where they are surprised by Sloan Whitney. Rosemary later meets Whitney and is strongly attracted to him. One afternoon in the Studio Larry is interrupted in his protestations of love to Rosemary by a screaming girl who accuses him. He tries to explain to Rosemary, but she refuses to listen and leaves him. She tells Nina about it.

CHAPTER XXIX

NINA smoked on in silence.

"Why didn't you tell me! Nobody told me. You must have all known about Germaine and—"

"Tell you! Didn't I tell you to get him do the visiting? Didn't I warn you to keep away from there except when we all went up for tea? But you would go, and you can count yourself darn lucky to be out of it scot free that's all I can say. How did you get out of—re-escape?"

"No—Bernie. But I didn't know, Nina—I didn't—"

Nina stood up. "Graham will be missing us. I'm sorry if you got mixed up in the Germaine blow-up, but you should have had better sense. You don't need character references so long as you play around with the crowd, and I warned you to go light on the solo entertainment. Now forget it! No use crying over spilt milk. Besides—I've got troubles of my own."

She pushed the pale-gold hair off her forehead with a despairing, desperate motion. "Well, let's get back to the hard labor."

Nina didn't seem the same. The whole atmosphere was charged with a secret, dark excitement. Little thought waves saw-sawed back and forth.

"Sloan friend, the artist, got married all of a sudden?" said Haley to Rosemary.

"Larry?"—

"The same. At the"—he was searching for the right word—"the urgent request of the bride. Fact is, we had quite a little love nest upstairs, it seems. Funny you never found it out—you were so chummy up there. Yes, they had a great old time up there screaming, and—say, where were you?"

"I went home—my mother was sick—"

"That's right—I remember the call." He did remember it, dash it she had gone home. "Well, when the young man declined to get the license she swore out a warrant—"

"Larry—a warrant?"

"And he changed his mind. You—you missed it. Real shotgun wedding. So, as I say we don't have to send a wedding present. They didn't leave any forwarding address"

Mr. Haley shook his head "Quite a scandal, I'm sure," he said.

Mr. Sims licked his lips. "You'll never hear from HIM again."

"I never want to." Rosemary cried.

Mr. Sims looked triumphantly at Mr. Haley. "You see?" he said. "You see?"

So Larry slipped out of Rosemary's life, silently, shamefully, leaving only hurt and bitterness behind.

All the dear, funny places he had taught her to love were haunted for Rosemary—haunted by Germaine's white, tear-streaked face and Larry's pitiful, beseeching hands.

"I feel so—so smudged!" she told Nina, in a little burst of confidence one night when, in a rarely soft mood, Nina had begged her to come to the little apartment on the hill for dinner.

Nina Tells Rosemary About Her Romance With Cuyler

"I feel as though I could never see the places where we went together without seeing Larry's face and hearing that girl cry—those terrible, terrible screams, Nina"—

Nina got up and poked the fire that didn't need poking. "I know," she said softly. "I feel that way—about places where Stanley and I have been together. About this place. As if I couldn't bear to stay here another moment, sometimes; as if I must lock it up and never come back. But you'll get over your hurt. You'll get over it because your heart wasn't touched."

"You didn't love Larry—you just had a few little schoolgirl illusions smashed. What does it matter to you that he's gone, except that someone you liked a little turned out a cad?

"Wait till you've loved with every ounce of your strength, every best of your heart, every drop of your blood—and then try to face the places where you were happy once!"

Where was Nina's lazy drawl, where was her gay indifference? The firelight flashing showed her face a pain mask of pain. Her tawny eyes burned. Her slim white hands were clenched.

"Nina!" Nina meant she loved Stanley Cuyler her father's friend; Stanley Cuyler who was married to the fat, jealous old woman in the beautiful Old, poor Nina, poor unlucky beautiful Nina . . .

Softly, shyly, Rosemary touched Nina's cheek. "Tell me," she said. Wouldn't it help—just a little?"

"There's so little to tell. And it goes back so far.

"I don't remember when I didn't love Stanley. I guess I always did. When I was a little girl. When he used to come to the old house to see Dad and bring me dolls and great boxes of candy he couldn't afford—he was so poor then, so long ago.

"He was everything to me, romance and sweetness and generosity and beauty. He was part of my childhood. Part of the sweet smoky nights when I'd sit on Dad's knee by the fire in the library with Stanley smiling at me from the old wing chair opposite.

"And when he got married . . . Oh, Rosemary, the pain of it. I was only fifteen. You think a fifteen-year-old kid can't care. Well, I did. I used to cry myself to sleep in the night. He was nearly thirty then, but he didn't seem like a grown up person to me. And she was mid dle aged, and blowsy and cheap and painted.

"I remember Dad—when we got the news. He thought Stan married her just for her money—she was awfully rich—and perhaps in a way he did. But he was only a poor, only a bookish, lonely boy, with big dreams, big ambitions, and no money to build them. . . . I want you to see that part—how she took a old him—a scheming, overripe old woman, old enough to be his mother—and he only a boy—" She broke off with a half-sob. She threw back her head angrily and went on.

"That was his wife. That's enough to show what marriage can mean. Holy Matrimony! Whom God hath joined! Tell me our love isn't finer and purer and more wonderful than that! Tell me I'd be better off with a ring on my finger and a marriage license in my bureau drawer. What more could he give me if I were ten times his wife?"

She threw out her arms, and the great emerald blazed, the Persian rugs glowed warmly, the fine bits of brass and pottery in the lovely room struck high notes of color.

"What more could I give to him? "And yet I'm the lost woman she's the abused, betrayed wife. She can sit down there in her fine home in the South the home he built for her with the money he earned himself, with her 200 pounds of fat rolled up in baby blue silk, and set detectives upon us."

"Me, I said weak."

"Oh [illegible] good. What [illegible] Instantly [illegible] supposed to identify [illegible] Jock [illegible] has got a cute voice. Is a sort of stage everything."

He passed himself on one elbow and [illegible] somebody at the telephone [illegible] "How are you [illegible] he asked it. "I bet your [illegible] as if they were both in the Battle of the Marne inside."

"It was not!"

"It should. You ought to have a whale of a hangover."

"I love. But you didn't name a bad [illegible] Say, Jock?"

"What for?"

"Yeah, I told you Jock."

"For crying out loud what else would you call me?"

"Well, I didn't know. Your behavior [illegible] sort of Master [illegible] Arkansas. Yvonne says he's [illegible] to take me somewhere to be skated."

"I'll take you both, of course?"

"Yvonne says she doesn't want any [illegible]

"What's the matter with her?"

"Search me, old scout. She says she's tired. She says I'm [illegible] a half-wit. She threw her head [illegible] and went on.

"That one's a kidding! Tell me I'm not [illegible] Holy Matrimony! Whom God hath joined! Tell me our love isn't finer and purer and more wonderful than that! Tell me I'd be better off with a ring on my finger and a marriage license in my bureau drawer. What more could he give me if I were ten times his wife?"

She threw out her arms, and the great emerald blazed, the Persian rugs glowed warmly, the fine bits of brass and pottery in the lovely room struck high notes of color.

"What more could I give to him? "And yet I'm the lost woman she's the abused, betrayed wife. She can sit down there in her fine home in the South the home he built for her with the money he earned himself, with her 200 pounds of fat rolled up in baby blue silk, and set detectives upon us."

'The Making of a Husband' Serial

BUT I knew he was annoyed almost beyond endurance, for nothing except the most terrible embarrassment can make Pat's face quite so think as it was at this moment.

"Why did you take the business of your firm away from mine?" I asked.

"Its not advertising we are," Pat replied. "Our letter told you the same, no doubt."

Then the barriers of my self control and reserve broke and I cried protestingly:

"But you can't do that to me, Pat. You owe me something better than that. My business will go on the rocks if all my best customers decide suddenly not to advertise. Maybe you were getting good service. I was only in the office once or twice a week at the most. I was at home—at the Birches—cooking Jim's meals. That is changed now. I'll be at my desk every day—from nine to six—or out on the street seeing printers and jobbers and newspapers—"

"You'd better not be doing that, Pat said severely.

"But I have to," I cried. "I have nothing but my business now."

"And soon—if all your clients are after taking away their accounts you won't be having that," Pat suggested.

"You mean—this is a concerted movement—to drive me to the wall? I hazarded.

"There! There! Now you are after saying anything like that," Pat inquired gently.

"I get it—between the lines," I said grimly. "It was a nice letter—coming right along with Peters and Loren Haldane's. How did you do it? Why are you trying to break me? There's only Yalda and Bertly Tompkins left—"

"If you'll be thinking," said Pat severely, "you'll be realizing that since old B. T. went east with Mary and Neal, and since Ray Acardo is out there with his, [illegible] no all [illegible] coming comes from them solely through this office."

"You mean that Tompkins & Co. is gone, too? I [illegible] "There, there, don't be [illegible] so." He [illegible] the [illegible] "All for [illegible]

"Would you be [illegible] for the last?" I demanded fiercely. "If a group of socialist fanatics made a concerted investment [illegible] you?

Heat Your Home With C[illegible]

SOCIAL and business engagements, especially during the indoor season, make such imperative demands upon the heads of the modern household that it is practically necessary to have a heating plant that can be controlled easily by women and children.

An oil burner is not only extremely easy to operate, but it is clean, economical and as fool proof as the safe which guards your valuables.

That your family may be independent of all those annoyances which go with old fashioned heating equipment, you should read with interest the oil burner advertisements in the Boston American and Boston Advertiser.

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

By WILLIAM P. KIRK

I WAS looking at a picter of the ocshun in the movies last nite, Pa was with me & he kep talking all the time. It doant mailk so very much differents ware Pa is, he talks anyhow.

Bobbie, sed Pa. I supposs you notis all those waves rising & falling, rising & falling, sed Pa.

What about it? I sed.

Well, Bobbie, sed Pa, those waves on the ocshun are like the littel Fads & Fashions on the grate Ocshun of Life, sed Pa. I reefer to the Radio, jazz musick, bobbed hare, crossword puzzils & all the other crazes that cum & go, sed Pa. Foolish peeple think wen sum craze starts that it is here to stay, sed Pa. Lot of peepil that that everybody wud keap rite on working crossword puzzils, sed Pa, but who is workin them today?

Not very many, I guess, I sed. Doant talk so loud, I sed. Everybody is striking a point at you, Pa, I sed.

Is this a lecture? sed the man with was setting next to Pa. Pardident cum here to hear you shoot off yure face, he sed to Pa.

Who cares what you calm here for? sed Pa. What are you going to do about it, if I keap talking? sed Pa.

I dount know for sure yet, sed the man, but I mite try stuffing this fist down yure throate, sed the man.

Oh Ho, sed Pa, so you are a tuff guy, are you? Maybe you doant know who I am, sed Pa, kind of suvice.

I doant know with one wuf of made the other out but just then the usher calm down the Isle & he sed Ware do you two Simpel Simons think you are? Shut up or git out of here, both of you.

Then Pa & the other gen shut up & I got a chanst to see the show. Pa is all the time telling what a grate fiter he used to be, but he is all the time wiggeling out of fites. I am Beginning to think my old gent aint much of a fiter after all.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

DO not ask me, "Is it wise?" with that wonder in your eyes. Wisdom, doubtless, is to know much of earth, its joy and woe. Wisdom is to dwell apart from the folly of the heart, from the sweet and simple things which man's daily living brings. Wisdom is to go alone into realms that few have known, seeking on these lonely heights solemn joys and rare delights. Yet, I feel, scant gladness lies in such lofty destinies, and the wisdom I would choose is the lore the humble use, knowledge of the tender notes from the happy bluebirds' throats, and of games the children play at the tranquil close of day. Wisdom I most highly prize sets a-light within your eyes little candle-gleams of bliss; what have sages like to this?

WHENEVER we see a picture or play end like that, we wonder where they are going to live.

Undoubtedly he will let her find their future home or apartment, and we'll wager that she will pick it from the Boston Evening American or Boston Advertiser classified ads.

MEDBURY SAYS---

INSTEAD of using the dining room, thousands of hostesses are now serving lap lunches in the parlor. A lap lunch is where you try to balance a cup of coffee on one knee and a piece of jelly-roll on the other.

ONE man had such a hard job doing it that he had to pin the sandwiches to his trousers.

HE even cut holes in the cookies and buttoned them to his vest.

HE was tickled to death when the hostess served doughnuts so that he could hang them over his fountain pen.

ANOTHER fellow broke his neck trying to drink a cup of coffee without taking it off his knees.

HE had to bend over so far that he wore out three pairs of suspenders.

ONE guest was dropping so much food that the hostess asked him to put his napkin on the floor.

HE told her he wished she served mashed potatoes so that they wouldn't roll off his lap.

HE spilled so much of the cheese cake that she had to put mousetraps around his chair.

THE chicken-a-la-king was wonderful but the dishes were so hot that they scorched his lap.

IT got so bad that every time he went visiting at their house he had to wear asbestos union suits.

HE even wore rough tweed trousers so that the jelly wouldn't slip off them so easily.

HE spilled so many cups of tea in his lap one night that the sardines were swimming from one knee to the other.

HE spent the whole evening trying to coax them back into the can.

BY serving a lunch in the parlor, the hostess saves her table cloth, but she ruins her guests, clothes.

NOT only that, but the most pathetic sight in the world is to watch a man with St. Vitus dance trying to balance a saucer full of coffee on his bad knee.

THIS style of eating may be all right, but when it comes to parlor entertainment, the average man would rather do away with food and have the hostess fill his lap with women.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax,

IT'S very easy to break an engagement of marriage because of a whim or snap judgment. But it's not so easy to win back love that has been lightly cast aside.

Profit by the sad experience of "Lonely at Heart" and think things over very, very carefully before you decide to break your engagement!

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I went about with a young man for over a year. I liked him very much.

"But one day another nice young man came along whom I liked better, so I stopped going with the first and started going with the latter. The first young man found that I did not care for him so much as I did for the other. Well, after a little I stopped going about with any men.

"When I wanted to go back to my former fiance, my parents wouldn't agree to it. They won't let me see him, write to him or even speak to him on the street.

"I am heartsick and lonely. Another thing, I don't know whether he still cares, because I can't write to him. We were engaged to be married when I left him.

"I know it's all my fault, but isn't there some way that I can win my parents' consent?

"Do you think he would care for me now? How can I go about winning his love again?

"They say, 'Where there's a will there's a way.' I have the will, but I can't find the way. Any advice will be of very great help to me.

"LONELY AT HEART."

YOUR letter, my dear, omits two important points—your age and the reasons your parents give for not permitting you to renew your acquaintance with your former fiance. Surely they would not take such a stand without good reason. Do they consider you too young to know your own mind or understand the responsibility of serious love?

Are you very young? If so, you had best be guided by their advice. For they have your interest at heart and their judgment is likely to be clearer than your own in this matter.

Talk affectionately with them and try to win their permission to write your former fiance, asking his forgiveness and friendship. With that much secured, you will have to take a chance on reawakening his love if it is dead.

It's so easy to follow a thoughtless whim and kill love—so hard to coax it back to life. Surely, you will know better next time, won't you, and will think twice before either entering into or breaking an engagement of marriage.

All success to you, my dear, in your quest.

Feminine Perversity could hardly be more strikingly illustrated than by the black satin "turned-around" gown, which is quite what its name implies. A very deep, flesh-colored, chiffon yoke, extending down the back, gives a startlingly nude appearance, while in front the flesh yoke is merely a band which continues from the mock decollete back.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND.

WHY is a kiss supposed to last a woman so much longer than it lasts a man? The same kiss that must last a girl, until the next time her lover calls, doesn't always last him as far as the next station.

* * *

Sometimes, a girl's faith in a man's fervid "line" is so complete and touching, that he is almost inspired to believe he's in love himself.

* * *

Most men seem to think that the only way to keep the glow of youth is by keeping the heart in constant circulation. But, alas, too much exercise of the emotions merely leads to a varicose vein of sentiment.

* * *

Next to that of an old circus horse trying to act like an unbroken colt, the funniest sight is that of a tame husband, who has obeyed the crack of the matrimonial whip for years, when he suddenly kicks up his heels and tries to act wild and skittish at a flapper party.

* * *

A man who has pulled himself out of a love affair, just in time to escape falling into marriage, has the same dizzy feeling of relief as the one who has just reached the side walk after having been grazed by a speeding taxicab.

* * *

Every prize-fighter is put on a diet and rigorously trained down before he goes into the ring; but the average man step nonchalantly into the matrimonial ring, all "soft" and susceptible and unsuspecting.

* * *

When a man actually admits a fault, he always appears to think that the "admission" has turned it into a virtue, for which he ought to receive the fatted calf, a Sunday School medal, and his wife's admiring plaudits.

* * *

Some lovers are like hardy geraniums, you simply CANNOT discourage them, no matter how you may neglect or ignore them. Others are like delicate morning glories, that fade away, the moment your smile of encouragement becomes a little too warm.

* * *

No matter what he may promise, nor how sincerely he may vow it, NO man can tell a woman how long his love will last, any more than he can tell her how long a cold or a fever or the good weather is going to last.

CHARCOAL'S USES

Most that has to be kept for a day or two before being cooked will remain fresh if sprinkled with charcoal. A piece of charcoal placed in the saucepan in which cabbage is boiled will prevent a disagreeable odor arising while the vegetable is cooking. Charcoal absorbs impurities and makes an excellent filter. Pieces of charcoal placed in flower vases will keep the water sweet.

People's Reserve Weapon

Under Direct Primary They Can Protect Themselves Against the Use of Money WHEN THEY WANT TO

Vice-President Dawes is, of course, entitled to his "personal view" that "the direct primary should be abolished."

But he will have to give better reasons than have yet been put forth before he can bring the public to his way of thinking.

It was not the fault of the direct primary that great sums have been used under it in efforts to buy nominations to office.

Money would have been equally powerful and, if corruptly used, equally malign under the convention system.

A million and a half of dollars poured into the Pennsylvania primary did NOT renominate Senator Pepper; supporters of the winner spent less than half as much.

On the other hand, in the Iowa primary, Brookhart was renominated for less than the cost of an average State convention.

The plain truth is that wealth, when coveting power, will use money lavishly and usually corruptly under any system.

The distinguishing merit of the direct primary is that under it the people can protect themselves against the misuse of money WHEN THEY WANT TO.

Whereas, under the convention system, with its back rooms and closed doors, the deals are usually fixed up while the people sleep.

It is a wholesome instinct which has moved the American Federation of Labor at Detroit to rally to the defense of the direct primary, for its repeal would leave the masses more than ever at the mercy of unscrupulous wealth. It is their one great weapon in reserve.

The tide of interest in the ballot seems ebbing, but it will rise to flood proportions if reaction should ever succeed in taking from the people the right to vote when they want to vote.

But it would be easier to defend that right, now that it has been won, than to recapture it should it be yielded.

What Do the People Want

Sooner or Later, THEIR Views About the Eighteenth Amendment Will HAVE to Be Considered.

There is no pussy-footing by the Republicans of Rhode Island on the prohibition question. Read what THEY say, in the platform adopted on Wednesday:

"We recognize the difficulties encountered in the enforcement of the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment, and recognize the uncertainty of public opinion regarding this amendment. UNTIL THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE IS DEFINITELY ASCERTAINED BY A RESUBMISSION OF THE QUESTION INVOLVED, A PROCEDURE WHICH WE FAVOR, we reaffirm our pledge of 1924 and stand unqualifiedly for the strict enforcement of all national and State laws, including the laws relative to the sale of intoxicating liquors and the suppressing of gambling and other vices."

What the MASSACHUSETTS Republican platform says concerning the same issue, you remember, is "The Republican party of Massachusetts stands for the strict enforcement of all laws."

The leaders of the G. O. P. in Rhode Island are to be commended for their spunk. THEY can see through a hole in a ladder, as they proved again by drafting the elderly but youthful Governor Pothier for another campaign. They'll need him, if they are going to beat Mayor Gainer.

Fist Fight in the Navy

Pilots, Not Polo Players

Secretary Wilbur decides wisely that United States sailors shall not engage in prize fights on any admission fee basis. When sailors fight it shall be "by the sailors, of the sailors, and for the sailors."

Fist fighting has nothing to do with naval warfare, so why allow brutality at all?

Secretary Wilbur, let us hope, will not allow fights between sailors to amuse officers. Sailors in the American Navy should not be put to fighting for the amusement of their superiors, as men put their dogs or gamecocks to fighting.

To that may be added that soldiers in the American Army should not be made to act as "hostlers," stable servants, rubbing down the horses of officers that play polo. Any American enlisting in the Army should not be put to work as a servant.

Incidentally the young officers that are permitted to amuse themselves and spend the taxpayers' money at polo, which means nothing in warfare, would be better employed, since they like risk, perfecting themselves as air pilots. This country will need air pilots some day. It will never need polo players.

Ford's Five-Day Week

It Will Come Slowly

Henry Ford's five-day week idea is spreading. The American Federation of Labor will work for the five-day week all over the country. Mr. Green, president of the Federation, says, "the 44-hour-week is inevitable in American labor." Ford starts the five-day, 40-hour-week, not 44 hours. That short week will come, but not in a hurry. Those that employ labor will not thank Ford for starting it NOW. They will thank him later.

Prosperity is based upon high wages. Those that work long hours for small pay have little to spend, little time to spend it.

In Britain organized labor is hit hard by what seems to be the complete failure of the great coal strike, lasting over years. Powerful unions are bankrupt, the savings of thousands of miners exhausted. Thousands are hurrying back to work, completely beaten, accepting terms less favorable than were offered last year.

The defeat of the miners means a great deal to the Government of Great Britain.

A miners' victory, putting organized labor in control of British industry, would have given the unions control of the British Government.

MYSTERIES OFTEN JUST RELATIONS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WHEN my girls were preparing for college they discovered, about three weeks before the entrance examinations, that they would be examined in trigonometry. They had not the slightest idea what trigonometry was, so I got a tutor from the college and he carefully tutored them for three weeks. That is, he crammed them so they could pass their examinations.

You understand how it is. They could pass the examinations, although they had no idea what it was all about. They did pass their examination and were successfully entered in the college.

During the time of their preparation they came to me one day and asked me what the word "sine" meant. I told them to look it up in the dictionary, which was what I had always done when I did not understand a word. Really, I did not know myself what a sine was.

They looked it up and then they came to me with the dictionary, saying that they did not understand the dictionary.

I read it over and found I did not understand it myself.

Having a friend on the college faculty I mentioned this story to him one day and asked him why I, who prided myself upon being a man of ordinary intelligence, could not understand what sort of a thing a sine was.

"It is very simple," he said. "The reason you cannot understand is that a sine is nothing at all. It is a relation between two things."

That is the trouble with many mysterious things in this world. We don't know what they are because they are not things at all. They are merely relations.

Take happiness, for instance. That is a relation between what you have and what you want. If you have more than you want you are happy. If you want more than you have you are unhappy.

So most of the abstract quantities of our thinking are relational.

Most people understand the truth to be something to be discovered or to be handed down as a sort of package. The fact is that truth is relational. That is, there is no truth, but there are truthful people.

There is no such thing as morality, but there are moral and immoral people.

Talk about finding the truth, loving the truth, and so on, is misleading.

There is no such thing as courage, but there are courageous men.

When it comes to that, there is no such thing as religion, that is, that you cannot get religion. There are religious people and irreligious people. Religion is not the words; it is the tune to which they are said. It is the way you live. In the New Testament religion is called a way; it is not called religion nor Christianity. It is a method of life.

So it is with education. Education is not something to be attained, but it is the learning how to attain something.

And culture is not something to be had. A cultured person is simply one who knows how to grow.

Odds and Ends of the Town

By BERT FORD

Brilliancy may be the cement but hard, loyal work represents the bricks in the building of a reputation. While reputations are not made in a day, every day's worthy effort adds to the foundation, so keep on building.

A LOCKER PROBLEM.

Said GEORGE WASHINGTON GRIMM, sports writer:

"HARVARD is up against it from a new angle today. As girls are barred from the CRIMSON lockers what'll they do about WILLIAM and MARY?

SKIPPER OF PARKS.

WILLIAM P. LONG, just approved as skipper of BOSTON'S PARKS, is the daddy of three sons and three daughters. His oldest son is the REV. WILLIAM A. LONG of BRIGHTON SEMINARY and his daughter, ELEANOR, recently entered the Novitiate of St. Joseph at FRAMINGHAM. The commissioner lives at No. 44 Tower street, FOREST HILLS. He is a Boston College graduate. He has been connected with Boston Park Department since 1896.

Studying in off hours and nights, plus wide practical experience as sub-foreman, superintendent of the department of trees and moths and deputy commissioner for nine years, made "BILL," one of the leading horticultural and entomological experts in the country. His ability is best reflected in the city's parks unsurpassed in the world. And how WILLIAM loves his job and his home.

A BIRD PARADISE.

HARRY G. HIGBEE, custodian of the AUDUBON SOCIETY bird sanctuary on MOOSE HILL in SHARON, wouldn't swap jobs with a millionaire. He's too happy caring for his feathered family. If you seek an interesting, exciting, while motoring, visit MOOSE HILL. You'll be charmed if you are a lover of birds.

There is a little museum, and, radiating from it, trails for the various breeds of birds, "Quail Trail," "Woodpecker Trail," etc., each living in little homes on poles best suited to their tastes, and all well fed and safe from cats and gunners.

MR. HIGBEE, a HYDE PARK man, says that birds which prey on others in the woods are so contented in their SHARON paradise that they never molest neighbors. He counted 240 specimens in the 200-acre tract this season. The birds all know and love him. He says he gets a kick out of feeding them. Some return each season. MOOSE HILL is a monument to HIGBEE and to the humane men and women who make the sanctuary possible. Go, and by all means, take the children.

FELICITATIONS

MR. AND MRS. JOHN POMPEO of No. 46 Pilgrim Parkway, QUINCY, are being showered with congratulations on the advent of their first baby, a pretty, dimpled girl, weight eight pounds three ounces. Now JACK is wondering how he can cut night work in connection with the POMPEO TRANSPORTATION COMPANY.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE man didn't offer Mrs. Wilson his seat in the crowded car and the lady is furious.

What's the world coming to when men no longer show any consideration for women? It's all because of this dreadful Equal Suffrage—trying to make women seem the same as men. Every one knows that women aren't the same as men—they're much finer, more sensitive and delicate.

It isn't necessary to repeat all of Mrs. Wilson's sentiments. You've heard them. If you're a Nice Woman—particularly a Nice Woman nearing forty—those sentiments have been part of your training. Since you were a tiny girl you've been admonished as to how Nice Little Girls Should Behave. You've been warned against being a Tomboy or Acting Rough. For Little Ladies Didn't Act That Way—and moreover, it would be bad for your highly specialized delicate feminine constitution. For the world of your youth firmly believed that little girls were made of much finer, rarer clay than little boys. Given to visions and ecstasies. But also given to backaches, wooziness, "declines" and other exhibitions of that frailty which was held to be inherent in "the weaker sex."

Have Our Doubts.

We're beginning to have our doubts of that theory. This present tennis-playing, channel-swimming generation of young ladies is making us wonder whether the "weaker sex" is half as weak as we thought it was—whether, indeed, it needs to be weak at all!

And now comes Alice Beal Parsons with some timely remarks on this subject.

Mrs. Parsons doesn't believe in the traditional physical inferiority of women. She believes that society has "wished it on" the ladies and that much of the pain and weakness suffered by women is caused by suggestion. Why the suggestion? To keep the ladies in their places. And let it be said in all frankness, a lot of them were, and are, most willing to be kept.

"No, of course, of course, whose attention has been called to this phase will question the effect of suggestion in inducing an artificial physical inferiority in women," says Mrs. Parsons. "The little girl is told from the beginning that she must save herself, that she must not play so roughly as her brother, must rest more often, and so forth.

"Suggested Ailments."

"It is extremely easy to acquire a headache or backache or toothache by suggestion. In the famous French experiment with a condemned criminal a man was even killed by suggestion. We can easily see how the continually repeated suggestions made to women that they are inferior physically, have operated actually to induce inferiority."

"But that's perfectly absurd," cries Mrs. Wilson. "Everyone knows that women are more highly organized nervously. And, of course, the mothers of the race must naturally be weaker and endure more pain than the men."

It's a touching theory and a lovely alibi, lady—but it isn't true. The most subtle analysis by surgeon or psychologist fails to reveal any greater delicacy in the female nervous system than in the male. Nor does the function of motherhood naturally carry with it any handicap of pain and weakness, as is proven by the health and strength of the peasant mothers who lead natural lives—and the records of the modern young mothers who lead untrammeled, athletic girlhoods.

WHEN YOUR MOTHER AND DAD MISS YOUR HOSPITALITY

IT'S a long time since dad and mother visited at your home.

Maybe you think it sufficient that you have visited them and they should be satisfied with that.

Well, they appreciate your visits, but they might like to see you in your home.

They want to keep in touch with your life at first hand.

They like a change from the part of host and hostess.

It is easy for you to go to "Mother's" and accept her good dinners, and you have a general good time made possible by the care and watchful thoughtfulness of loving parents.

But you are not seriously considering putting yourself out, or making it inconvenient for yourself, so that mother and father may visit you, are you?

You are becoming mightly selfish and you need to wake up.

Are you really unwilling to do your share to show a grateful appreciation of their efforts?

Fancy as a Healer

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE French call fancy or imagination, "la folle du logis," which may be translated—though no translation of such expressions ever conveys more than an approximation to the original meaning—"the fool, or lunatic of the house."

The enormous practical influence of "la folle du logis" in the affairs of men and women, both when they are well and when they are ill, is strikingly brought out in a book recently published in Paris by Dr. Pierre Vachet, on "La Pensee qui Guerit," or, say, "Thought That Heals."

After reading it one is tempted to think that "la folle du logis" has more influence in the house of the brain, where she seems to live like a capricious but favorite elf, than any of the more sedate sisters, such as reason and reflection. Fancy has obtained an astonishing empire over the most ordinary functions of the body.

When a dog has been accustomed to hear a certain note of music at the moment that a piece of meat is furnished, the simple sound of that note will produce a flow of saliva associated with the appetite for meat.

When the dog hears that note or sees the paper in which the food is usually wrapped, he imagines the meat, the saliva that moistens his mouth announcing it to him. The precision of this mechanism is such that if the sound is modified ever so little, the salivary reaction does not take place.

Thus the mental image acts upon the muscles and especially upon the various glands, which role is so important in the chemical defense of the organism. This is so true that many medicaments are efficacious only through the imagination of the sick person.

Thus the ridiculous remedies of our ancestory, like orvietan, theriaque (certain mixtures made by charlatans), sympathy powder and l'onguent des ames (soul ointment) produced marvelous cures.

How strangely this influence may act in the phenomena of "presentiments" is illustrated by the following anecdote:

A young Italian woman went to consult a cartomancienne (diviner by cards), and was told that misfortune awaited her from a man of her own nationality who would bear a characteristic mark.

That evening in a restaurant she noticed that the Italian waiter who served her had eyes of different colors. Frightened by this apparent omen, she insisted upon and obtained the immediate dismissal of the waiter.

The latter, thus deprived of a livelihood which he had but just obtained after long search, lurked at the door and, when the young woman came out, poignarded her. In that way the prophecy was realized.
